Autographs on my mind

Recently I was a guest on the TTM Cast, which is a podcast that covers the topic of collecting autographs through the mail. The interview was conducted by Jeff Baker. Here is the link to the podcast: https://bit.ly/2EeFIh6.

Being part of the podcast was a fun experience, as we discussed my collecting background, how I secured a job in the sports collectibles hobby, and different trends that are taking place in the Hobby. We also discussed the different ways in which Sports Collectors Digest covers collecting autographs through the mail.

Collecting autographs through the mail is a unique way to obtain autographs that has a rich history behind it. As technology has changed, it has become easier for collectors to get to places professional athletes are signing autographs in person. And more collectors have gone that route.

The question of autograph authenticity has also driven more collectors to pursue autographs from professional athletes in person. If you personally see the athlete sign a collectible, you know it is real. The same can't be said for autographs obtained through the mail.

All that said, collecting autographs through the mail still has a strong and loyal following. Part of that is probably due to the fact that it is fun to do. Collectors have the excitement of mailing out the autograph request. Then collectors play the waiting game, and there is anticipation as to what will be returned by the professional athlete and how long it will take for that to be sent back to the collector.

When a collector sends out an autograph request through the mail, chances are that they don't expect to have to wait 27 years for the request to be returned. That's exactly what happened recently with an autograph request that a collector sent to former big leaguer Zack Monroe. The original request was mailed out around 27 years ago. We share that story in this issue of SCD. Turn to page 18 to get all the details about that story, and what the collector received 27 years later.

I give Monroe a lot of credit for fulfilling the request and writing a nice note.

This issue of SCD is filled with plenty of other articles you'll want to read through. Baseball fans in general, and specifically fans of the New York Yankees, will want to check out the articles about Mike Mussina discussing his election to the Baseball Hall of Fame, Bucky Dent reflecting back on the famous home run he hit in 1978, and how Dana Cavalea, who was the strength, conditioning and performance coach for the Yankees, assembled a memorabilia collection. ◆

Bert Lehman is the editor of SCD. He can be reached at bert.lehman@fwmedia.com.

Deliver the letter

Collector receives autographed cards 27 years after sending request letter

Twenty-seven years ago, Joe Zaccaro, of Orange County, New York, encouraged his daughter and son to politely ask for autographs from baseball players by sending baseball cards and a self-addressed-stamped-envelope to them.

"I did it for two reasons," Zaccaro said. "One was to help with their writing skills. I wanted them to be very polite and write to a professional athlete. And then when they received something back in the mail they would be excited. When you're 7 or 8 years old and you get something in the mail addressed to you, you're pretty excited to open it. The more they received, the more encouraged they were to continue to do it."

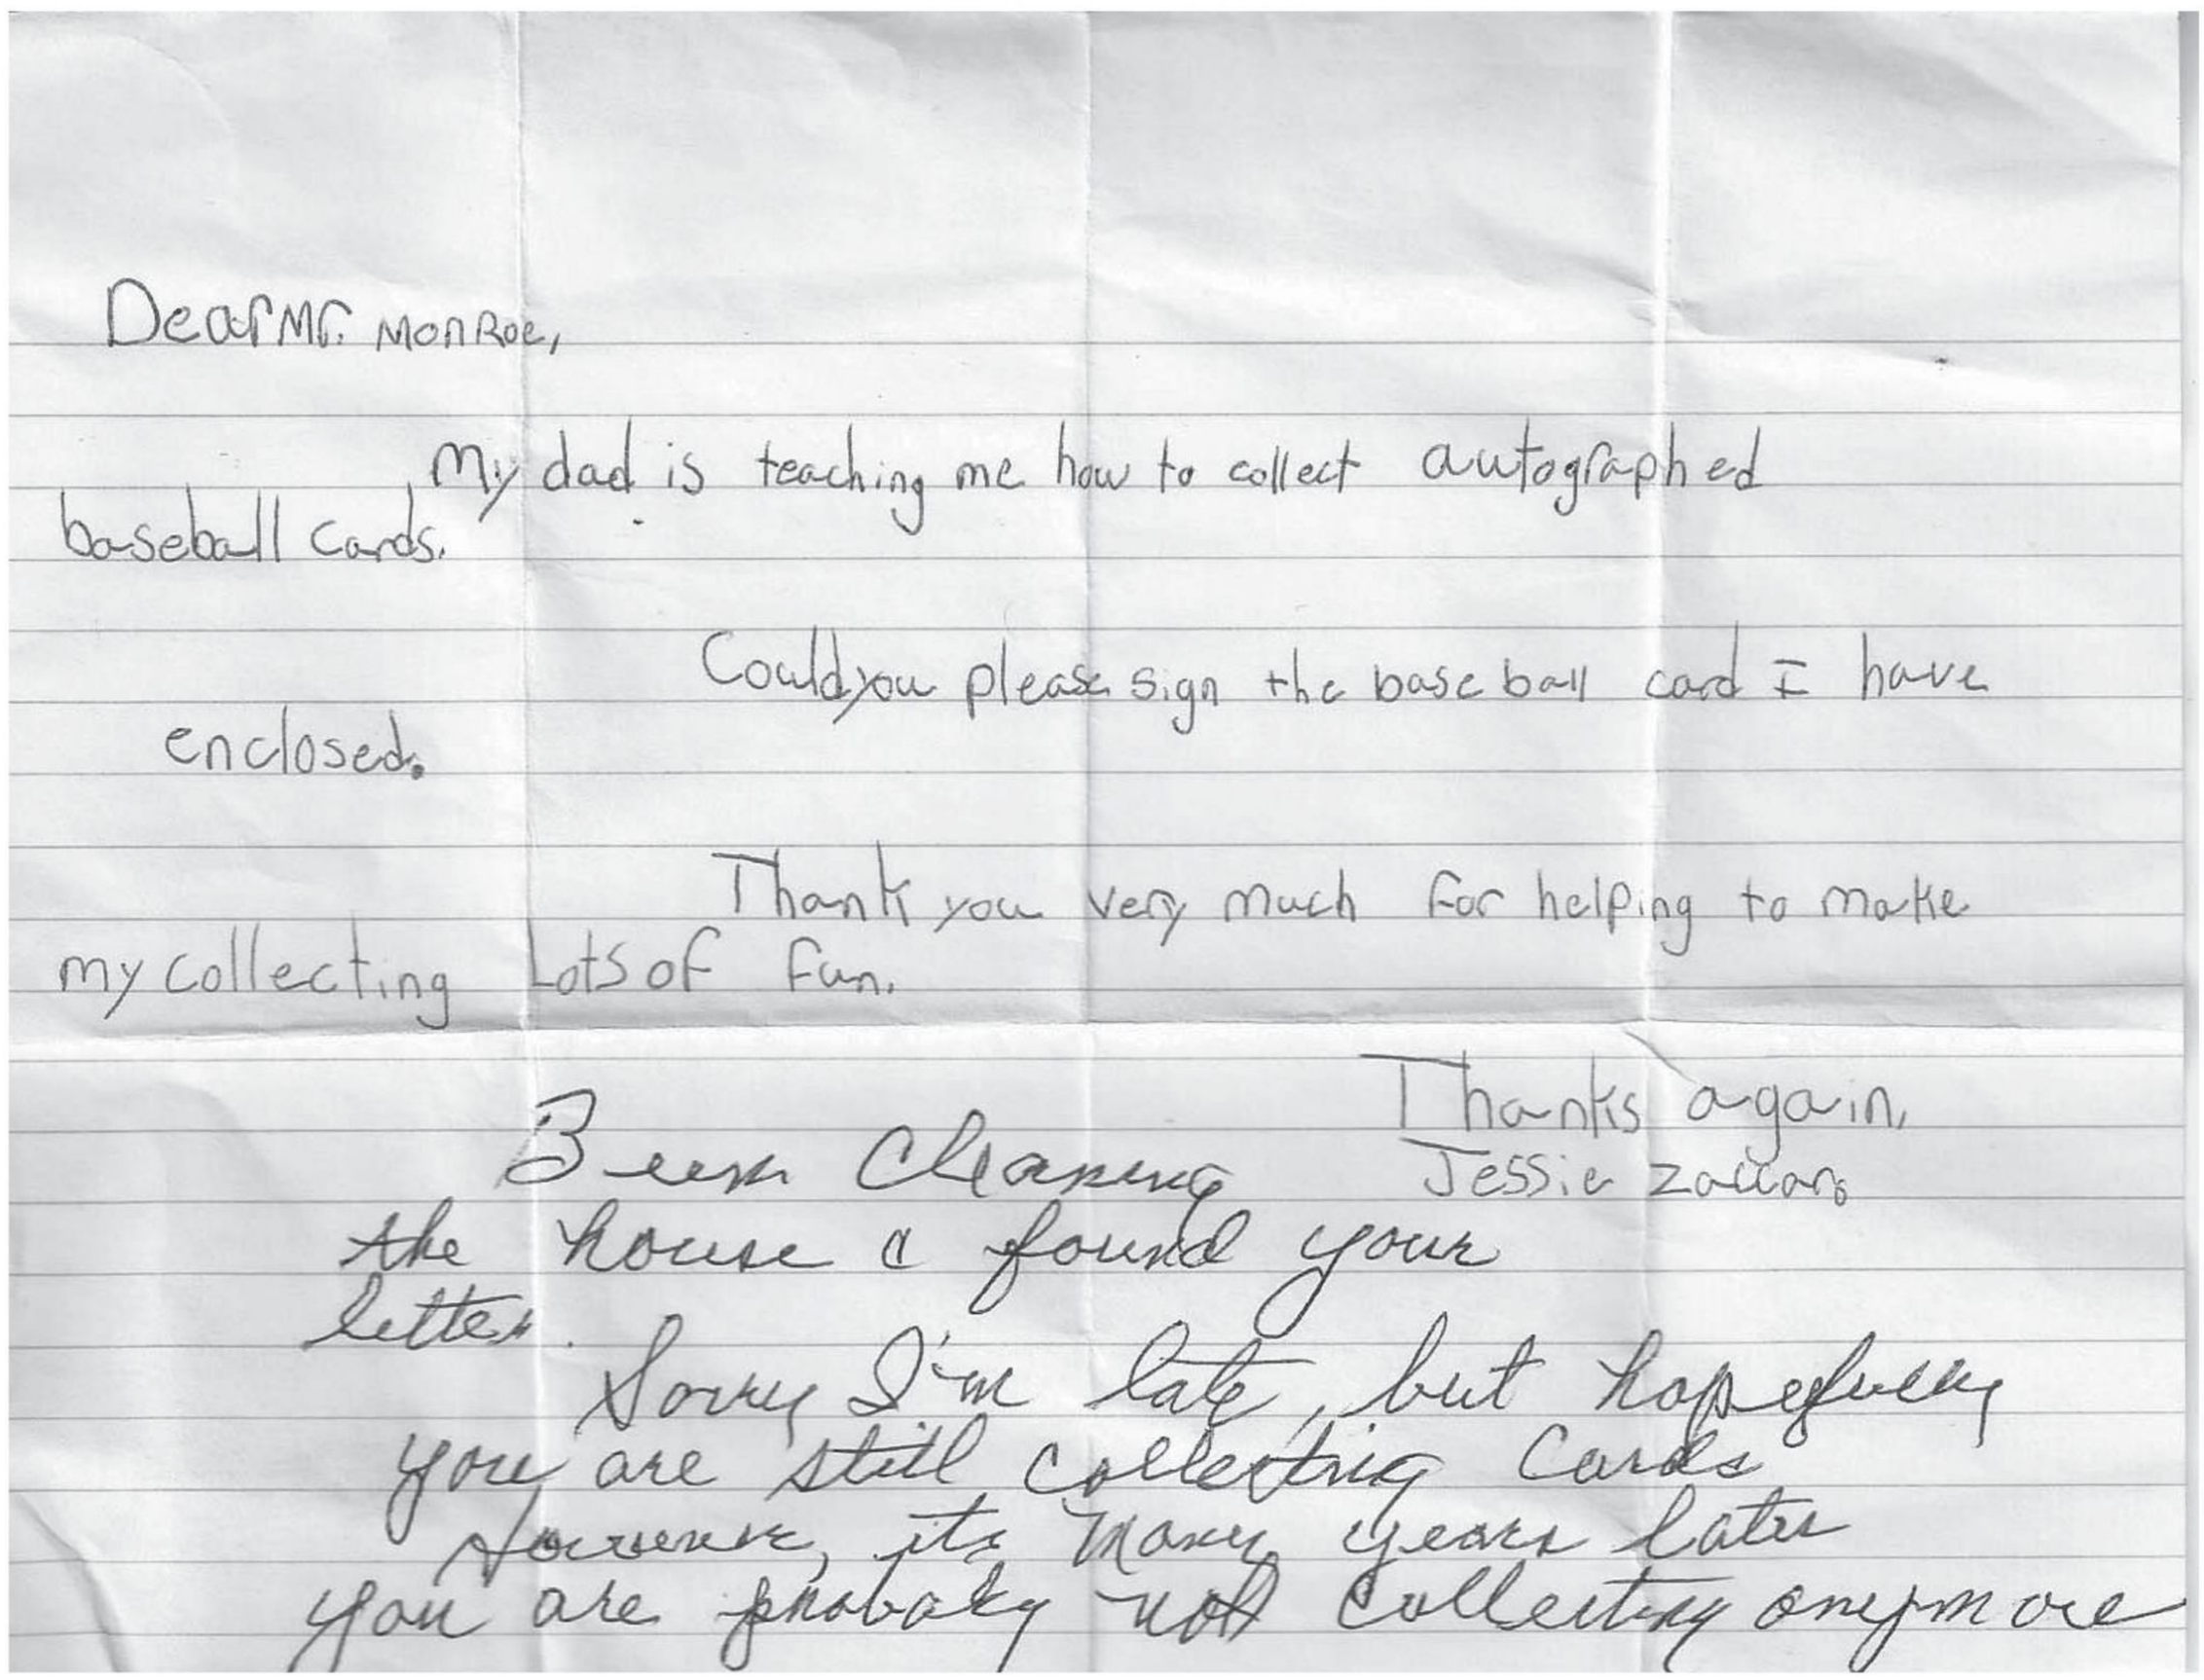
Zaccaro said they did this for six months to a year.

"They got close to a couple hundred cards," Zaccaro said.

Zaccaro's daughter, Jessie, was seven years old at the time, while his son was a couple of year's younger. He added that if his children weren't enjoying writing to baseball players, they wouldn't have done it.

"When they started getting the cards back it was great," Joe Zaccaro said. "The thing that was most impressive, not only getting the card back, but the letters they'd send to the players, a lot of the players would send the letter back and they'd put notes on it – encouraging notes on the letter itself. We saved all those letters. I saved all the cards for them."

Jessie would get creative when writing her letters, Joe Zacccaro said.



Dear Mr. Monroe,

My dad is teaching me how to collect autographed baseball cards.

Could you please sign the base ball card I have enclosed.

Thank you very much for helping to make my collecting Lots of fun.

Thanks again,
Jessie Zaccaro

Been Cleaning the house & found your letter.
Sorry I'm late, but hopefully you are still collecting cards forever, its many years later you are probaby not collecting anymore

The letter that Jessie Zaccaro originally sent to Zack Monroe 27 years ago. Monroe recently returned the letter with two autographed baseball cards. He wrote a short note at the bottom of the letter.

"She wrote these baseball sayings on them," Joe Zaccaro said. "They all got a kick out of it and all responded in a very positive way.

"One that was really good, there was a pitcher for the San Francisco Giants, he was a relief pitcher. She sent it (letter) to Japan and he sent the card back and he signed it in Japanese and in English. He sent the letter back and he wrote it in Japanese."

About 80 percent of the cards that the kids sent out were returned.

"That's what really encouraged my kids to go on," Joe Zaccaro said.

The return percentage recently increased, as Joe Zaccaro recently received an envelope in the mail addressed to his 34-year-old daughter. The handwriting on the envelope was that of his daughter from when she was a child. Inside the envelope was a letter Jessie had written to Zack Monroe, as well as two Monroe cards that were autographed. Monroe also wrote a note on the letter that was originally sent 27 years ago.

"I was shocked," Joe Zaccaro said. "I recognized the envelope right away because it had my daughter's handwriting on it."

It was the same SASE that was sent out 27 years ago, but had postage added to it.

Joe Zaccaro said he doesn't know what happened to the letter over the past 27 years, but assumes Monroe placed it somewhere and it got forgot about, only to be recently discovered and returned.

In the note that Monroe wrote on the originally letter, he stated that he found the letter while cleaning.

"Sorry I'm late, but hopefully you are still collecting cards. However, it's many years later, you are probably not collecting anymore," Monroe stated in his note.

Joe Zaccaro said Jessie laughed when she found out the letter was returned, and that she is in the process of writing a thank you letter to Monroe.

"It was a good experience and we had a lot of laughs over it," Joe Zaccaro said. "It was to teach my kids how to be polite and how to be professional and polite to players. If you do this, you have a good chance of getting it back. As long as you're polite, you're always going to have a positive response. And sure enough, they did."

Who knew that sometimes the response takes 27 years. ◆

MOE BERG IS BACK IN UNIFORM FOR HIS FIRST OPENING DAY SINCE 1941 – The Spy Behind Home Plate, the first feature-length documentary about Moe Berg, will open in Washington, D.C. on Friday, May 24, followed by New York on Friday, May 31 and Los Angeles and San Francisco on Friday, June 7 before rolling out to theaters across America throughout June and early July. The Spy Behind Home Plate is the newest film about an unknown Jewish hero from award-winning documentary filmmaker Aviva Kempner, and tells the real story of the enigmatic and brilliant baseball player who turned spy for the U.S. Office of Strategic Services (OSS) during World War II. The Spy Behind Home Plate will also play at film festivals and theaters internationally throughout the baseball season.

For more information on The Spy Behind Home Plate, including events and speaker programs related to the film, visit www.spybehindhomeplate.org.

Berg not only played for the last Washington Senators team to play in a World Series (1933), but he also trained with the OSS not far from the D.C. team's home, Griffith Stadium. The Spy Behind Home Plate features rare historical footage as well as revealing interviews with an All-Star roster of celebrities and other individuals from the worlds of sports, spycraft and history. Interviewees include Berg's relatives, fellow baseball players, biographer Nicholas Dawidoff, authors David Ignatius and Thomas Powers, MLB historian John Thorn, film professor Dr. Annette Insdorf, playwright Michael Frayn, sports commentator Larry Merchant, sports columnist Ira Berkow, OSS Society president Charles Pinck, Los Angeles Angels manager Brad Ausmus, U.S. Senator Ed Markey and baseball executives Jerry Reinsdorf and Bud Selig.

Kempner, who produced, wrote and directed the film, describes it by saying, "Moe Berg is finally achieving the recognition he so deserves as a World War II hero. This full-length feature documentary explores the broader landscape of his immigrant Jewish upbringing, why he was called the brainiest man in baseball, and his many courageous OSS missions geared towards preventing the Nazis from developing the atomic bomb. Berg is the American hero we all need to know more about!"

Born in New York, Berg grew up in Newark, New Jersey. The erudite major league catcher played on five different baseball teams in the 1920s and '30s, spoke a multitude of languages, earned degrees from Princeton University and Columbia Law School, and attended the Sorbonne. In 2018, Berg and the 13,000 heroic men and women of the OSS finally received a well-deserved Congressional Gold Medal during a moving ceremony where Berg's heroism was cited.

Berg played for the Brooklyn Robins (which became the Dodgers), the Chicago White Sox, the Cleveland Indians, the Washington Senators, and the Boston Red Sox during baseball's Golden Age. In 1934, Berg joined the All Americans, an All-Star baseball team comprised of Hall of Famers, including Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Foxx, Lefty Gomez, Earl Averill, Charlie Gehringer, and manager Connie Mack, for a barnstorming exhibition tour in Japan. Berg came back with more than the usual souvenirs. He also brought back film he secretly shot of the panorama of Tokyo skyline, including factories, military installations and Tokyo Harbor. Why Berg put himself in harm's way to shoot this film in militaristic Japan is anyone's guess, but years later, it was believed to have been viewed by military personnel planning Jimmy Doolittle's daring bombing raid of Tokyo in 1942.

Berg may have only had a .243 batting average during his 15-year Major League career, but it was the stats he collected for the OSS that made him a most valuable player to his country during World War II. In 1942, after serving two years as a coach for the Red Sox, Berg got back in the game as a "player" when he was selected by the OSS to go behind enemy lines in Europe and spy for them. Two of his most dangerous missions included going to Italy to interview top Italian physicists and assess their knowledge of the German bomb program. The second mission was in 1944 where the OSS assigned him to attend a lecture by German physicist Werner Heisenberg in Zurich. For the Swiss trip, Berg was given a gun and a cyanide pill to take with him and was instructed to shoot Heisenberg if he was convinced that the renowned scientist was constructing an atomic bomb for the Nazis. He later worked for the OSS in a prominent role in U.S. efforts to undermine the German atomic bomb program. After WWII, Berg remained elusive and later became reclusive.

Based in Washington, D.C., Kempner, a director-writer-producer dynamo, boasts a resumé of critically acclaimed and award-winning documentaries, including Rosenwald; Yoo-Hoo, Mrs. Goldberg, and Peabody winner The Life and Times of Hank Greenberg. She also produced another WWII documentary, Partisans of Vilna.

THE TOPPS COMPANY AND VLADIMIR GUERRERO JR. SIGN EXCLUSIVE MEMORABILIA DEAL – The Topps Company and top MLB prospect Vladimir Guerrero Jr., have agreed to an exclusive multi-year deal, making Topps the only place to get his autographed memorabilia. Look for signed Topps Authentics jerseys, bats, balls, photos and more on Topps.com.

"We are thrilled to add Vladimir Guerrero Jr., as one of our exclusive athletes with our memorabilia line, Topps Authentics," said David Leiner, Topps Global general manager of Sports & Entertainment. "He is exactly the type of player and person who embodies Topps with his great athletic ability, perseverance and excitement that he brings to the field every day. We are proud to partner with baseball's next rising star and give fans an opportunity to be closer to the game."

Topps® has made it a purpose to feature the biggest and brightest stars as part of its Topps Authentics line. Other exclusive athletes include Shohei Ohtani, Gleyber Torres, and Francisco Lindor.

"I'm proud to partner with Topps, a company that puts players first and has amazing heritage in baseball," Guerrero Jr. said. "I'm excited to give fans access to my game-used memorabilia."

Guerrero Jr., son of Hall of Famer Vladimir Guerrero, made his MLB debut on April 26 to much fanfare. He was MLB's No. 1 prospect the past two years and was selected as Baseball America's Minor League Player of the Year in 2018.

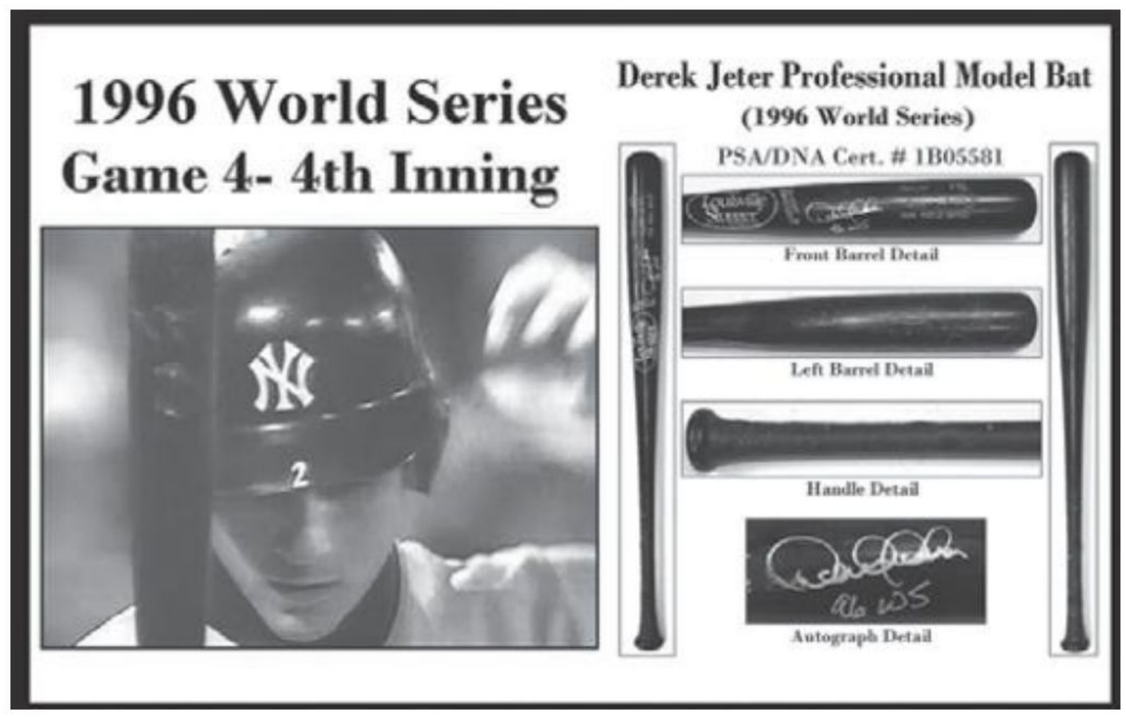
PSA UNVEILS NEW PHOTO-MATCHING SERVICE FOR PROFESSIONAL MODEL BATS – Professional Sports Authenticator (www.PSAcard.com) has announced that it is adding photo-matching examination to its professional model bat authentication service.

A true photo-match is a definitive match of an image or video footage frame to a specific bat. A conclusive photo-match can add tremendous value to an already certified bat by PSA. The extent of the item's value, however, depends on a variety of factors including the rarity of the match, the player involved, the moment, event, season or even the era from which the item is matched.



The photo-matched 1996 World Series bat that Derek Jeter used in multiple games during that year's Fall Classic. It was also signed by Jeter.

"It is not merely a style or model match, but instead an exact match to that item," said Joe Orlando, CEO and president of Collectors Universe, PSA's parent company, and the author of Legendary Lumber: The Top 100 Player Bats in Baseball History. "While finding a true match can be difficult, there is no question that a confirmation can add value to a bat, even one that is already considered a high-grade example."

As the company has done since 2005, it will continue to certify the authenticity and grade of professional model bats. But for an additional fee, PSA will research available imagery and video records and compare uniquely identified characteristics to be examined, visual matches displayed on the bat in question. Well-known bat authority John Taube, who currently leads PSA's team on bat authentication orders, will spearhead the photo-matching process.

"Photo-matching on current-day bats is becoming a common request," he said. "Matched bats demand prices in multiples of established market prices, depending on the bat and matched event. Vintage bats of Hall of Famers see even more dramatic increases in value."

One example of a photo-matched, game-used bat that scored national headlines with its eventual sale came from the arsenal of former New York Yankees Captain Derek Jeter. In 1996, Jeter led the Bronx Bombers to a World Series title after batting .314 during the season in which he was named American League Rookie of the Year. In 2014, after being photo-matched to TV footage showing that it had been used by Jeter in Games 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the '96 World Series, the PSA/DNA GU 10 graded bat sold for a record $155,350 at auction. Jeter also signed the bat.

PSA's goal is to provide collectors with the strongest foundation of authenticity for professional model game-used bats. Positive photo-matched results will be recorded with an image of the bat added to PSA's Letter of Authenticity. Photo-matching fees are based on the bat's declared value and begin at $75. For more information, visit PSA's Professional Bat Authentication services page or call 609-487-8003.

"Indisputable evidence of game use by a player is the ultimate goal of any authentication process," added PSA President Steve Sloan. "Photo-matching can provide an added layer of confidence and appeal that many collectors demand in today's hobby."

AL BRANCATO JERSEY ON DISPLAY AT SPORTS LEGENDS OF DELAWARE COUNTY MUSEUM – The Sports Legends of Delaware County Museum has added a 1939 Philadelphia Athletics road jersey worn by the late Al Brancato to the Mickey Vernon / Danny Murtaugh Gallery. The jersey is on loan from the Jim Spahr collection.

Brancato, a Delaware County resident for more than 70 years, played for Connie Mack's A's in 1939,1940,1941 and 1945. During World War II, he wore a U.S. Navy uniform in 1942, 1943 and 1944.

An added attraction to this display is a photograph of Brancato and Vernon dressed in their white Navy attire as they enjoy some rest and relaxation in Honolulu. Another photograph pictures Mack giving some batting tips to Brancato when he played for Mack during his rookie season in 1939.

Brancato and Vernon played for different organizations in the majors, but were teammates in the minor leagues during the 1938 season. Both players were called up to the big leagues during the 1939 season.

The museum is located at 301 Iven Avenue, Wayne, Pa. 19087 and is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. For more information call 610-909-4919 or visit www.sportslegendsofdelawarecounty.com. ◆

Obituaries

Ted Lindsay

Hockey Hall of Famer Ted Lindsay died March 4. He was 93.

Lindsay was known as "Terrible Ted" and played the majority of his career with the Detroit Red Wings. During his career Lindsay was an 11-time All-Star and was part of the Red Wings teams that won the NHL Championship in 1950, 1952, 1954 and 1955. He finished his NHL career with 379 goals and 472 assists in 1,068 games. The Red Wings retired his No. 7 jersey in 1991. In addition to his play on the ice, Lindsay helped pioneer the first NHL players' union, and began the tradition of players skating around the rink holding the Stanley Cup after their team wins the championship.

Gino Marchetti

Gino Marchetti, a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, died April 29. He was 93.

After playing college football at the University of San Francisco, Marchetti was a second round draft pick of the New York Yanks in 1952. The Yanks would eventually become the Baltimore Colts. During his career, Marchetti was selected to 11 Pro Bowls and led the Colts to back-to-back championships. He retired three different times, only to return to the Colts after the first two times he retired. His final game was in 1966, at age 40. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1972, his first year of eligibility.

Gunther Cunningham

Former NFL coach Gunther Cunningham died May 11. He was 72.

During his coaching career, Cunningham coached at the college level, in the CFL and the NFL. After 30 years as a coach, Cunningham received his first head coaching opportunity in 1999 when he was named the head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs. He was fired after two seasons after he compiled a 16-16 record. Those would be his only two seasons as a head coach in the NFL. Other teams he held a coaching position with included the San Diego Chargers, Los Angeles Raiders, Tennessee Titans and Detroit Lions.

BIG TRAIN, ALMOST PERFECT — You don't see many T206 tobacco cards in "PSA Mint 9" condition. But when one pops up, collectors pay a premium. And when the player on such a well-preserved card is at the level of Walter Johnson, well, the appeal and price grow exponentially.

So it wasn't at all shocking when, in early May, a PSA 9-graded T206 portrait card of Johnson fetched $135,000 on eBay. It's a beautiful specimen of an important piece of sports memorabilia—probably the most desirable issue to feature the man they called "Big Train."

Johnson actually appeared in the acclaimed T206 set in two variations. The more common pose has a blue background and features an illustration of the pitcher looking to his left, with his hands held tight to his chest.

The less-common pose is the one discussed here—a close-up photographic portrait capturing a young and serious-looking Johnson. Legendary photographer Carl Horner is known to have taken the photograph. It was hand-tinted for the card's production, giving it the look of a painting. The coloring on Johnson's hair, a bright orange, looks exaggerated. But that's not a complaint—just an observation.

Overall, this is a striking image and a treasure of a card. It typically sells for around $30,000 if graded at 8. As always, one grade point higher resulted in that far higher price of $135,000. (The hands-at-chest T206 of Johnson, by the way, sells for around $90,000 if in 9 condition and around $20,000 if in 8 condition.)

As for the player himself, Johnson was a master on the mound, using a killer curve and serious smoke to log 417 wins and a 2.17 career ERA. He was a first-ballot Hall of Famer in the first class ever to be inducted at Cooperstown (1936). Johnson went into the then-new Hall with an estimable group: Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner and Christy Mathewson.

TOM: FOREVER TERRIFIC — The sad news made its way around in March: Tom Seaver has been diagnosed with advanced dementia. "Tom will continue to work in his beloved vineyard at his California home, but has chosen to completely retire from public life," according to a press statement released by the Baseball Hall of Fame. "The family is deeply appreciative of those who have supported Tom throughout his career, on and off the field, and who do so now by honoring his request for privacy."

On the heels of that news, there was a predictable uptick in Seaver-related listings made available on eBay (at press time, more than 18,000). Among those that sold were items that showed the collecting audience's penchant for grabbing onto mementos related to a beloved player.

One bidder, for example, spent $12,599 for a PSA 9-graded specimen of Seaver's 1967 Topps card. The "Rookie Stars" issue pictures Tom Terrific with fellow pitcher Bill Denehy, whose promising career was cut short by a shoulder injury.

The reverse of the card—which printed a month into the 1967 Major League season—notes that Seaver won three out of his first four games for the Mets that season. Two of his wins came against the hard-hitting Chicago Cubs, who featured future Hall of Famers Billy Williams and Ron Santo (another Hall of Famer, Ernie Banks, was out of the lineup that day). Among Seaver's back-to-back wins over the Cubs was a 10-inning 4-hitter, during which he gave up only one unearned run.

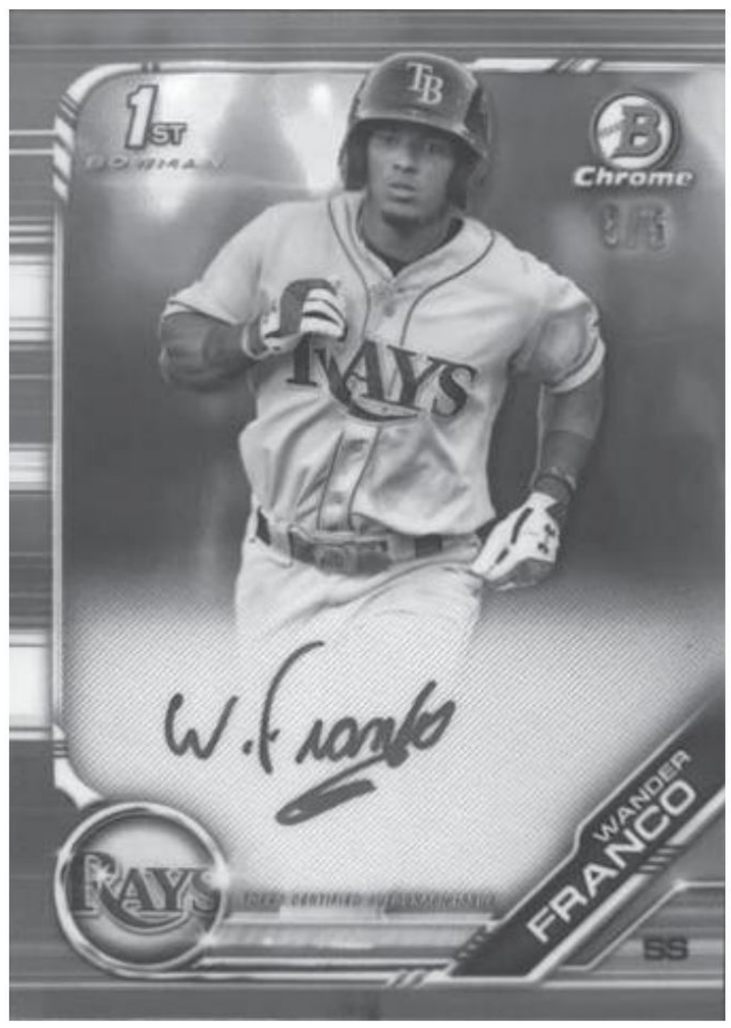
Seaver's early-season success as a rookie in 1967 was no mirage. He would finish the season with a 16-13 record, a sterling 2.76 ERA, and 170 strikeouts in 251 innings, winning the NL Rookie of the Year Award.

The performance foretold what was to come. Seaver pitched for 20 seasons in the bigs, finishing in 1986 with a 311-205 record and a 2.86 ERA, with 3,640 strikeouts, 231 complete games and 61 shutouts.

WANDER WHO? — Wander Franco, that's who. The minor-league star in the Tampa Bay Rays chain has been stirring up excitement for the Bowling Green Hot Rods in the Midwestern League (Single-A ball). Last season, Franco batted .351 for the Princeton Rays in the Appalachian League, swatting 11 homers in 242 at-bats.

A call-up to the bigs isn't imminent for Franco this season (expect a 2021 arrival). But that didn't stop collectors from going all-in on a rare Bowman Chrome signed Red Refractor rookie card of the switch-hitting shortstop. Twenty-nine bids pushed the price of the card—one of only five made—all the way to $22,900.

It might make you feel old to read this, but here goes: Franco was born on March 1, 2001.



ON THE OUTSIDE — "Ten" is the key number here…. Among the 10 items outside our Top 10 chart is a PSA 10, Gem-Mint 1960 card of Packers legend Bart Starr. Issued by Topps, the card features a close-up photo of the future Hall of Famer as a 25-year-old. Starr was coming off a season (1959) in which he established himself as the Packers' No. 1 QB, posting a 4-1 record as a starter.

While Starr's 1960 card in PSA 10 condition brought $17,655, you can drop down ever so slightly in grade… but drastically in price. Find one graded in PSA 9 and you can get it for $900 to $1,000. For a PSA 8, the price range is $150 to $250.

And now… on to "the next 10":

• $18,850: 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle (BVG 4.5)

• $18,500: 1986-87 Fleer Michael Jordan (PSA 10)

• $18,100: 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle (BVG 3.5)

• $17,950: 1956 Topps Roberto Clemente, white back (PSA 9)

• $17,850: 1952 Topps Eddie Mathews (SGC 7)

• $17,655: 1960 Topps Bart Starr (PSA 10)

• $17,300: 2018-19 Panini National Treasures Luka Doncic, #13/20, auto patch (ungraded)

• $16,200: 1996-97 Topps Chrome Refractor Kobe Bryant (PSA 10)

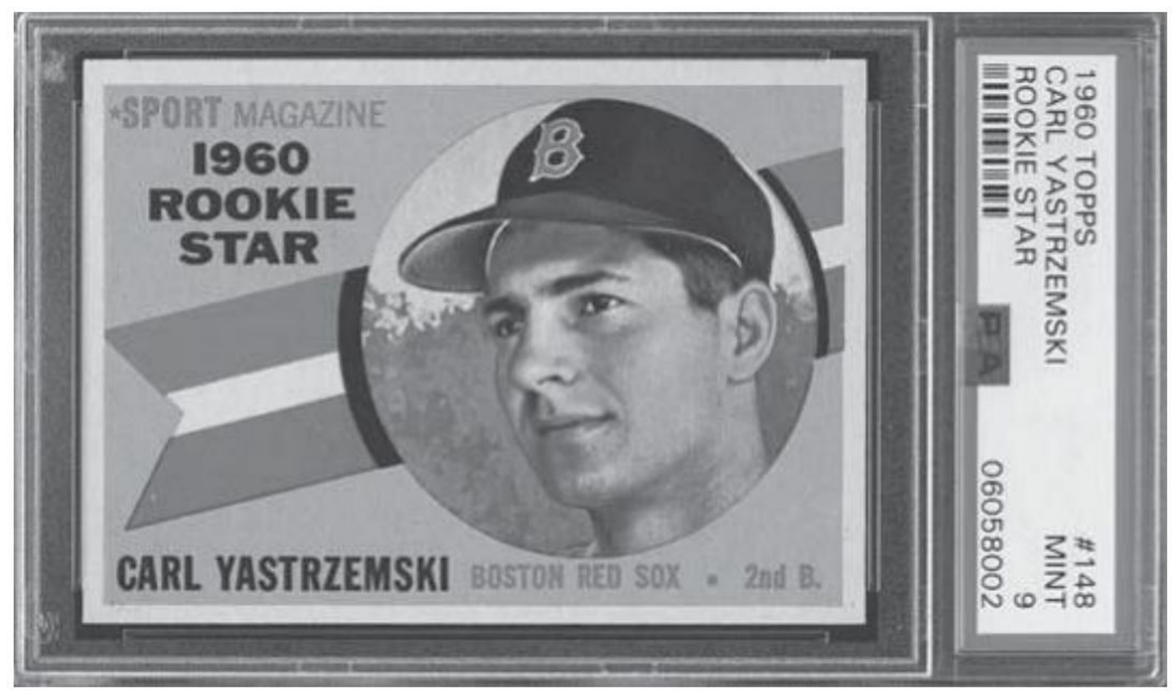
• $15,652: 1909-1911 T206 Ty Cobb green portrait (SGC 5.5)

• $15,300: 1984-85 Star Michael Jordan (BGS 9)

THROWBACK YAZ — Here's an item we haven't seen on our chart: a 1960 Carl Yastzemski Topps card. The front of the card heralds Yaz as a Sport Magazine Rookie Star. At the time, he was playing second base but he'd switch later to left field.

The card's reverse cites Yaz's eye-popping 1959 stats while playing for Raleigh in the Carolina League: a .377 average with 15 HRs and 100 RBI.

The reverse also includes text from Sport's editors: "It looks like the Red Sox will be able to cash in this year on the reported $100,000 they gave Carl for signing. He was sought by every club in the majors. Last season [1959], he debuted in pro ball and led the Carolina Lg. in batting while winning the loop's MVP award."



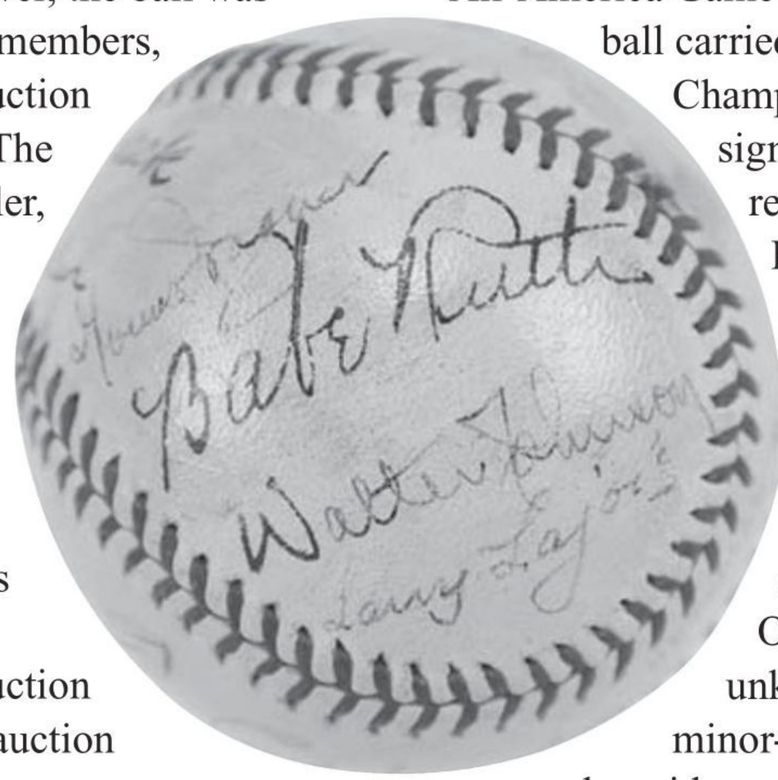
Sport was a year off. Yaz would stay in the minors for one more year of seasoning in 1960, batting .338 for AAA Minneapolis in the American Association. In 1961, however, he won a starting job for the Red Sox and played in 148 games, batting .266 with 11 HRs and 80 RBI. Yaz would play through the 1983 season, finishing his Hall of Fame career with a .285 average, 452 homers and 1,844 RBI. ◆

Something for everyone

1939 inaugural Baseball HOF induction signed ball leads Lelands Spring 2019 Classic Auction

A baseball signed by 11 of Major League Baseball's original Hall of Fame inductees in 1939 and a Bobby Orr circa 1972 Boston Bruins game-worn jersey headline the Lelands Spring 2019 Classic Auction, which is open for bidding and runs through June 7.

One of the greatest signed baseballs ever, the ball was autographed by 11 original Hall of Fame members, who were all present at the inaugural induction ceremony in Cooperstown in June 1939. The ball features the signatures of George Sisler, Cy Young, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins, Connie Mack, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Babe Ruth, Walter Johnson, Larry Lajoie, Ty Cobb and Honus Wagner. The autographs on the ball were collected that day by Eddie Rommel, a star pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1920s and early 1930s and later an American League umpire. A similar 1939 HOF induction class signed ball sold for $623,000 in an auction last year.



The 1939 HOF baseball being offered by Lelands is one of 42 pieces consigned by the Rommel family to the auction. Among the other highlights is a 1924 Yankees team signed baseball with a "rookie" Lou Gehrig. Given that Gehrig appeared in just 10 games in the 1924 season and his official rookie season was 1925, this is one of the earliest Gehrig-signed baseballs. The collection also includes a 1929-30 Rommel Athletics game-worn uniform, a Dwight Eisenhower "Opening Day" single-signed baseball to Rommel and a photograph collection.

Fresh to the market, the Orr circa 1972 game-worn, signed jersey is one of the finest original hockey jerseys in existence and was worn by not only a Hall of Fame icon, but also the best defenseman in history. The Orr jersey is the latest blockbuster Orr item to be auctioned by Lelands. Earlier this year, Lelands sold an Orr 1966 Topps USA Test #35 PSA Mint 9 for a world record $204,000 and the second highest amount ever paid for a hockey card.

The auction also features Knicks legend Walt Frazier's game-worn jersey from Game 7 of the 1970 NBA Finals, which is one of the 10 most important basketball jerseys ever offered for public sale. In the historic, series-clinching win over the Lakers that gave the Knicks their first title, Frazier had 36 points, 19 assists and 7 rebounds in what is considered the best Game 7 performance ever. The jersey has been photo-matched to Game 7.

Another centerpiece of the auction is a collection of Pittsburgh Steelers game-worn jerseys directly from the team's archive, including those worn by Lynn Swann, Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris, Jack Lambert, Mel Blount and Jack Ham, among others. A portion of the proceeds from the sale of the jerseys will be donated to the Chuck Noll Foundation for Brain Injury Research.

The auction also boasts Heisman Trophy winner Ernie Davis' last-ever game-worn jersey – from the 1962 Coaches All-America Game – as well as a Syracuse football game-used ball carried by Davis during the team's 1959 National Championship season, a 1959 Syracuse team-signed football, a 1956 Jim Brown Syracuse career trophy game ball, and Floyd Little's 1973 Pro Bowl game-used jersey. Among the other football memorabilia up for bid is a rare 1940s Sammy Baugh Washington Redskins team-issued and game-used jacket.

The Lelands Spring 2019 Classic Auction also features a 1914 Babe Ruth Baltimore Orioles team photo – the only vintage Orioles team photo known to exist. Then an unknown 19-year-old rookie pitcher with the minor-league Orioles, Ruth would win 14 games by midseason before being sold to the Boston Red Sox. The photo is especially significant because it's one of only a few original images of Ruth in an Orioles uniform in existence.

Other auction highlights include the earliest known baseball photos of Cap Anson, a 1952 Topps complete set with a PSA 5 Mickey Mantle rookie, a newly discovered and highest-ever graded Ty Cobb 1917-20 M101-6 Felix Mendelssohn card, Yankees star Aaron Judge's first career grand slam ball and the 1968 American League MVP Award presented to Denny McLain for his 31-win season.

The auction also includes a knockout collection of boxing memorabilia and the highest graded boxing card sets ever to come to auction, headlined by a 1910 E78 SGC graded complete set and an 1889 N386 Spaulding & Merrick Canada Chop John L. Sullivan SGC 20, which is one of the holy grails of boxing cards. Other highlights include Sonny Liston's robe from his 1968 fight with Henry Clark, Jake LaMotta 1946 fight-worn trunks, a 1971 Muhammad Ali vs. Joe Frazier "fight of the century" on-site fight poster signed by both, and a program and ticket from the historic 1892 John. L. Sullivan vs. James J. Corbett fight.

"This is one of the most diverse auctions we've had in years – one that's packed with unique and important pieces," said Lelands Chairman and Founding Partner Josh Evans. "From the 1939 Hall of Fame baseball and Orr jersey to the Frazier 1970 Game 7 NBA Finals jersey and the finest boxing collection up for bid in decades, this auction has something for everyone."

A MOOSE CALL TO THE HALL

Mike Mussina receives call to the Baseball HOF his sixth year on the ballot

Can you imagine a Hall of Fame pitcher, who had 536 career regular-season starts and 21 in the postseason, saying one of his greatest thrills in Major League Baseball was pitching in relief? Of course, that rare relief appearance came in the postseason, a seventh game in an American League Championship Series (ALCS), no less, while he played for the New York Yankees in a game against—Who else?—the Boston Red Sox.

Mike Mussina, who will enter baseball's shrine this year, won his first seven starts in 2003 for the New York Yankees. It was the first time a Yankees starter went 7–0 to begin the season since "Bullet" Bob Turley accomplished that feat in 1958. Mussina went on to win 17 games during the 2003 season and helped lead the Bronx Bombers to their 39th American League pennant. But in that 2003 American League Championship Series, Moose etched his name into Yankees lore.

The talented right-hander, who established himself as a reliable starter since he broke into The Show with the Baltimore Orioles in 1991, had lost a couple of tough games to the Red Sox in the 2003 ALCS. Yet he remained ready to contribute in any way he could to the Yankees' effort to win the hard-fought ALCS against the rival Bosox.

The series came down to a deciding seventh game, played at Yankee Stadium. The prize was the American League pennant and a trip to the World Series. The stakes couldn't have been higher for either team in this bitter rivalry, but the Yankees didn't want the Red Sox winning the American League Championship anywhere near the Bronx.

The starting pitchers for the all-important Game 7 were Roger Clemens for the Yankees and Pedro Martinez for Boston. Clemens had defeated Martinez in Game 3 of the series but Martinez always gave the Yankees batters fits at the plate.

The Red Sox got out to an early lead. Right fielder Trot Nixon came up with a man on first in the top of the second inning and homered off Clemens. Boston added another run that inning after catcher Jason Varitek doubled. He then scored when Yankees third baseman Enrique Wilson made a wild throw to first on a ground ball hit by Red Sox center fielder

Johnny Damon. A leadoff homer by Boston first baseman Kevin Millar in the top of the fourth inning made the score 4–0 Red Sox. Clemens then walked Nixon and, in a surprise move, Yankees manager Joe Torre got Mike Mussina up in the bullpen. The next batter, Red Sox third baseman Bill Mueller, singled, moving Nixon to third, and forced Torre's hand. He lifted Clemens and called Mussina in from the pen.

"My heart was pounding out of my chest—what a feeling," the veteran hurler recalled. With runners at the corners, Moose struck out Varitek and then got Damon to hit into a double play. It was the turning point of the game, as Mussina's gritty pitching performance kept the Yankees in the game and reenergized them. Mussina then pitched two more scoreless innings, giving Yankees first baseman Jason Giambi a chance to hit a solo home run in the bottom of the fifth, making the score 4–1.

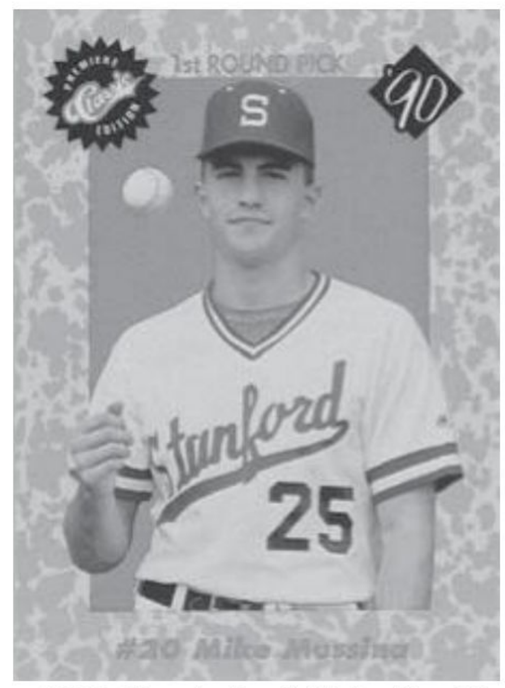
Torre felt Mussina had done enough, pitching three shutout innings, and put reliever Felix Heredia into the game in the top of the seventh. Heredia got the first two outs and then was replaced by Jeff Nelson, who got the third. In the bottom of the seventh inning, Giambi hit another solo blast off Martinez, pulling the Bombers closer, at 4–2.

1991 Score No. 383

The Yankees began to notice that Martinez was beginning to tire. But Red Sox manager Grady Little left his starter in the game. Nelson came out for the top of the eighth inning and, after retiring the leadoff hitter, was replaced by David Wells. Red Sox designated hitter David Ortiz promptly hit a home run off Wells, making the score 5–2. Wells retired the next two batters to end the inning.

Then, in what is still considered a controversial move and argued about to this day, Little sent Martinez out to pitch the bottom of the eighth inning. The Yankees roared back against Martinez in that bottom of the eighth inning and, with a series of hits, tied the score and sent the game into extra innings. That set the stage for the Yankees' Aaron Boone to hit one of baseball's most dramatic walk-off home runs, in the bottom of the 11th inning, and send the Bronx Bombers to the World Series.

It's generally agreed that without Mussina giving his exhilarating performance and keeping the Yankees in the game, all would have been lost. Not only did he stop the Red Sox rally, he buoyed the Yankees' spirits, thrusting them right back into the game.



1990 Classic Draft Picks No. 20

Moose said Game 7 of the 2003 ALCS is one of his fondest memories from his 18-year career (1991–2008) in the major leagues.

"Coming into the game in relief like that was just something I had never been asked to do before. It's Game 7 of the ALCS and the place is packed. It's Yankee Stadium and I have to jog in from the bullpen to the mound in the midst of the game. I don't normally do that," the right-handed starter said. "I usually walk in before everyone is there. That's when I walk or jog to the mound from the dugout, not the bullpen, not in the middle of all the excitement. Everyone's screaming and to get in there and be effective and get a strikeout and a double play to get out of the inning and give us a chance, and then to pitch another couple of innings and give us a chance to win—that was big."

While Moose always wanted to win a World Championship, he never did, but says that relief appearance in the 2003 ALCS meant as much to him as winning a World Series ring. The Yankees lost the 2003 World Series in six games to the Florida Marlins. Mussina started Game 3 of the series and pitched seven strong innings, picking up the win in a 6–1 Yankees victory.

Moose was set to pitch Game 7 of the 2003 World Series, had there been one, but the Yankees went down to defeat in Game 6 by a 2–0 score, giving the Marlins the World Championship.

With 270 wins in his career, Mussina was considered a model of consistency throughout his playing days. He won 11 or more games in 17 of his 18 seasons in the bigs. He had 17 wins in a season twice (2001, 2003), 18 wins three times (1992, 1999, 2002), 19 wins twice (1995, 1996), and 20 wins once (2008). He amassed 2,813 strikeouts, pitched 3,562 2/3 innings and could field his position exceptionally well, winning seven Gold Gloves.

Despite Mussina's striking stats, induction into the National Baseball Hall of Fame was never a sure thing for the right-hander. Even this year, his sixth year on the Baseball Writers Association of America (BBWAA) ballot, there was some doubt as to whether he would receive enough votes. But the right-handed hurler from a small town in Pennsylvania was hopeful of one day making it into the shrine as a result of the way the vote was going for him the last few years.

He first appeared on the Hall of Fame ballot in 2014.

"Honestly, at the beginning, the very first year, I'm just thankful that 20 percent of the writers felt that I deserved to be given a vote because if you watch the voting close enough, there are a lot of very, very good ballplayers who don't make it past the first ballot," he pointed out.

Players on the BBWAA ballot need to garner 5 percent of the vote to stay on the ballot from year to year. They need 75 percent of the vote to win election.

"So you need to get the votes that first year or you're not even going to stay on the ballot," he noted.

Then Mussina went up to 24.6 percent his second year.

"The third year it jumped quite a bit (to 43 percent). Now I'm thinking, 'Wait a minute here. We are going in the right direction,'" the pitcher recalled. With voters starting to appreciate his 270 wins, all coming in an especially productive era for hitters, it started to look like Mussina was approaching immortality. Still he was wary of only having seven years left to pick up the support he needed.

Getting to 51.8 percent in his fourth year on the ballot and then 63.5 on his fifth year put Mussina ever so close to election. Even with those two big incremental jumps, Mussina thought picking up another 12 percent this year was "a lot to ask for." Still he was optimistic that his support would increase some this year, but Mussina didn't think he would "jump from 63 percent to 75 percent that quickly." This year, he received 76.7 percent of the vote.

"So, I was caught a little bit off guard. But I'm honored and very proud," Mussina said.

Mussina grew up in Montoursville, Pennsylvania. The small town is just six miles from Williamsport, the birthplace of Little League baseball. What better place for a future big leaguer to grow up? The new Hall of Famer still lives in Montoursville, and is head coach of the boys basketball team at Montoursville Area High School, where he graduated.

On the cold afternoon this past January when Mussina got the call that he had been elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame, he was just finishing up basketball practice. He was sworn to secrecy by HOF officials not to reveal the outcome of the vote until the official announcement was made later that evening. Of course, Mussina said, the whole town knew the vote was being announced that day. He quickly wrapped up basketball practice and, with his teenage son Peyton by his side, Mussina snuck out of the high school gym to avoid answering any questions about the vote.

"It was a little crazy until I could tell everyone and then it really got crazy," he said. "I think I set a new record for text messages."

As a kid, the future major league hurler was driven and had plenty of God-given talent. He practiced pitching tirelessly from the age of eight, when he started playing Little League baseball. He earned the nickname "Moose" as a Little Leaguer because of the first syllable of his last name. By 11 years old, Mussina recalled, he realized that he was throwing the baseball so hard it would hurt his father's hand to play catch with him. Other kids his age didn't experience that when playing catch with their dads and that made the youngster wonder if perhaps he had a special flair for the game.

At Montoursville Area High School, Mussina put together a dazzling scholastic career, compiling a 24–4 record with a 0.87 earned run average. He also played shortstop when he wasn't pitching. But it was his exploits on the mound, including racking up strikeouts against his opponents, that earned the young hurler Pennsylvania Baseball Player of the Year honors in both his junior (1986) and senior (1987) years. He capped off his high school baseball career by leading Montoursville to a Pennsylvania High School State Championship.

An energetic athlete, Mussina could not sit idle during the baseball off-season and played both football and basketball while waiting for baseball season to come around again. He scored 1,382 points as a guard on the basketball team and saw plenty of action on the gridiron.

During the summer between his junior and senior years in high school, the impressive right-handed pitcher played on the U.S. Junior Olympic baseball team. In a tournament in Canada that summer of 1986, he struck out 16 members of the Cuban team on his way to a 1–0 victory.

That got major league scouts planning trips to Montoursville to watch Mussina in action closer to home. But he had made up his mind, long before the flurry of scouts descended on his hometown, that he wasn't ready for a pro career and was going to college, even if he was drafted by a major league club while still in high school.

The Baltimore Orioles took a chance anyway and drafted Mussina in 1987, but, true to his word, the hurler went on to college. That turned out to be a good decision. Mussina attended Stanford University. In his freshman year on the Stanford baseball team in 1988, he helped the school win its second College World Series in a row. Even though he compiled a 9–4 record as a freshman, he found that college hitters could handle what he was throwing, as baffling as it was to high school batters. He started upping his game, adding pitches, developing more movement, and fine-tuning his hurling skills, he said. He also taught himself how to throw a very tricky knuckle-curve.

Meanwhile, he was also studying economics, just in case major league scouts didn't come calling again. An injury in his sophomore year limited the amount of action Mussina saw that season, but he was back to full strength as a junior and won 14 games. He had an ERA of 0.99 and after his junior year in college—in 1990—was drafted once again by Baltimore. This time he was ready for the pros and answered the call.

Mussina aggressively moved through the Orioles' minor league system, having ironed out some of the flaws in his youthful pitching style while in college. He began his pro career in July 1990 just a few weeks after the spring college semester ended.

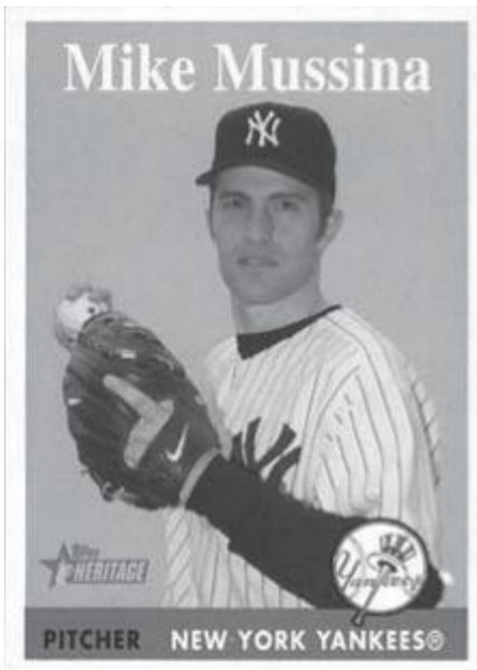
Mussina's minor league career got off to a rocky start.

"On my first road trip, the bus ran over my luggage. That's how my minor league career started," he said with a smile.

He debuted in Double-A ball in the Eastern League with the Hagerstown Suns. His first start was officially on July 19, 1990. He actually made a start on July 14, but that game was rained out after two innings and didn't count.

"It rained so hard that day, they couldn't even get the tarp on the field," he remembered.

Interestingly that rainout took place in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, where the Suns were visiting the Williamsport Bills, a Seattle Mariners farm team at the time. Run-over luggage, torrential rains—it's all part of minor league ball. But it does get better.



2007 Topps Heritage No. 224

In that July 19 start against the Canton Indians, Mussina pitched four scoreless innings giving up only two hits, striking out four and issuing no walks. He got a no decision as the Suns went on to lose the contest 3–0 after Mussina left the game. Overall, in seven starts with Hagerstown, the 21-year-old Mussina was 3–0 with a 1.49 ERA. That earned him a promotion to the Triple-A Rochester Red Wings in late August, as the team was making a playoff run.

He had just enough time to pitch 13 1/3 innings at the end of the 1990 Triple-A season, getting no decisions but recording a 1.35 ERA. In the 1990 International League postseason, the up-and-coming hurler started two games, but again didn't figure in a decision. Rochester ended up being the International League's top team in 1990, winning the Governor's Cup. But then the Red Wings lost the 1990 Triple-A Classic—a series between the best team in the International League and the American Association—to the Omaha Royals 4 games to 1.

For Mussina, the adjustments at every level of baseball were basically the same.

"In college, there are more guys in the lineup who can hurt you than in high school," he said. "In Triple-A there are more guys who can hurt you than in Double-A. You have to make fewer mistakes. You have to concentrate more."

In 1991, he returned to the Rochester Red Wings and continued his rapid rise through the minors. The masterful hurler added the International League Pitcher of the Year Award to his resumé in 1991, going 10–4 for the Red Wings with a 2.87 ERA. The Orioles called him up to the big club on July 31.

Early on, Mussina became known in the majors for his pinpoint control and icy demeanor on the mound. At 6-foot-2 and 185 pounds, the right-hander did not cut an imposing figure on the mound, but he knew how to get hitters out, and that reputation built over the years. When Mussina took to the hill, opposing batters recognized that it was going to be a tough day at the office.

He used six pitches effectively during his career. He had a change-up, a hard knuckle-curve and a slow curve to go along with three types of fastballs—a cutter, a two-seam fastball and a four-seam fastball. His fastballs all moved in different ways. For example, his cut fastball broke into left-handers and away from right-handers.

He was always known for keeping the batter off-balance and for outthinking hitters. He challenged hitters by being unpredictable and kept them guessing. The now-50-year-old former hurler could make the adjustments he needed, season after season, to consistently win.

His first taste of Major League Baseball competition in 1991 came on August 4, when he gave up only four hits in 7 2/3 innings of work in a game against the Chicago White Sox. But one of those hits was a home run to Pale Hose slugger Frank Thomas. That cost Mussina the game. He lost 1–0. He would finish the season 4–5 with a 2.87 ERA in 12 starts.

He started the 1992 season with Baltimore and won 18 games with a 2.54 ERA and made the American League All-Star team. He also finished fourth in the league's Cy Young voting (Oakland's Dennis Eckersley won the award that year). Mussina ended up playing 10 years with the Orioles (1991–2000) and had a number of sensational seasons, winning some extremely well-pitched games and anchoring the Baltimore pitching staff.

In the strike-shortened 1995 season, when only 144 games were played, Mussina still managed to win 19 games. When the Hall of Famer won 18 games in 1999, he finished second in the Cy Young voting to Pedro Martinez, who won 23 that year. In his decade with the Birds, Mussina finished in the top 10 for the Cy Young Award seven times, and he made the American League All-Star team five times (1992–1994, 1997, 1999). Moose won 147 games for the O's, struck out 1,535 batters, and pitched 2,009 2/3 innings with a 3.53 ERA.

In 1997, he had a spectacular postseason. Mussina outdueled Seattle Mariners pitching great Randy Johnson twice—once in Game 1 and then again in Game 4—to give the Birds a 3–1 American League Division Series victory. Then in the 1997 ALCS, against the Cleveland Indians, the O's stalwart went seven innings in Game 3, striking out 15 and giving up only one run. But the Orioles eventually lost the well-pitched game in 12 innings 2–1. Mussina ended up with a no-decision.

He came back on three days' rest to throw eight scoreless innings in Game 6, but once again the Orioles' bats were listless. Mussina left the game after eight innings with the score 0–0. The Birds lost in 11 innings 1–0, and lost the series 4 games to 2.

A free agent after the 2000 season, the star right-hander had many suitors. One of them was the New York Yankees. Mussina was not enamored of the big city, preferring a small town. Yankees manager Joe Torre, who had heard rumors about Mussina's concerns, called Mussina and talked to him about some open spaces and quiet locales in the suburbs surrounding New York City. Mussina would later say the call was one of the major factors in his decision to don the pinstripes.

Unlike many big stars who often have an adjustment period when moving from one team to another after free agency, Mussina hit the ground running in the Big Apple. He won his first start for the Bronx Bombers on April 5, 2001. He went 7 2/3 innings to lead the Yankees to a 1–0 win over the Kansas City Royals.

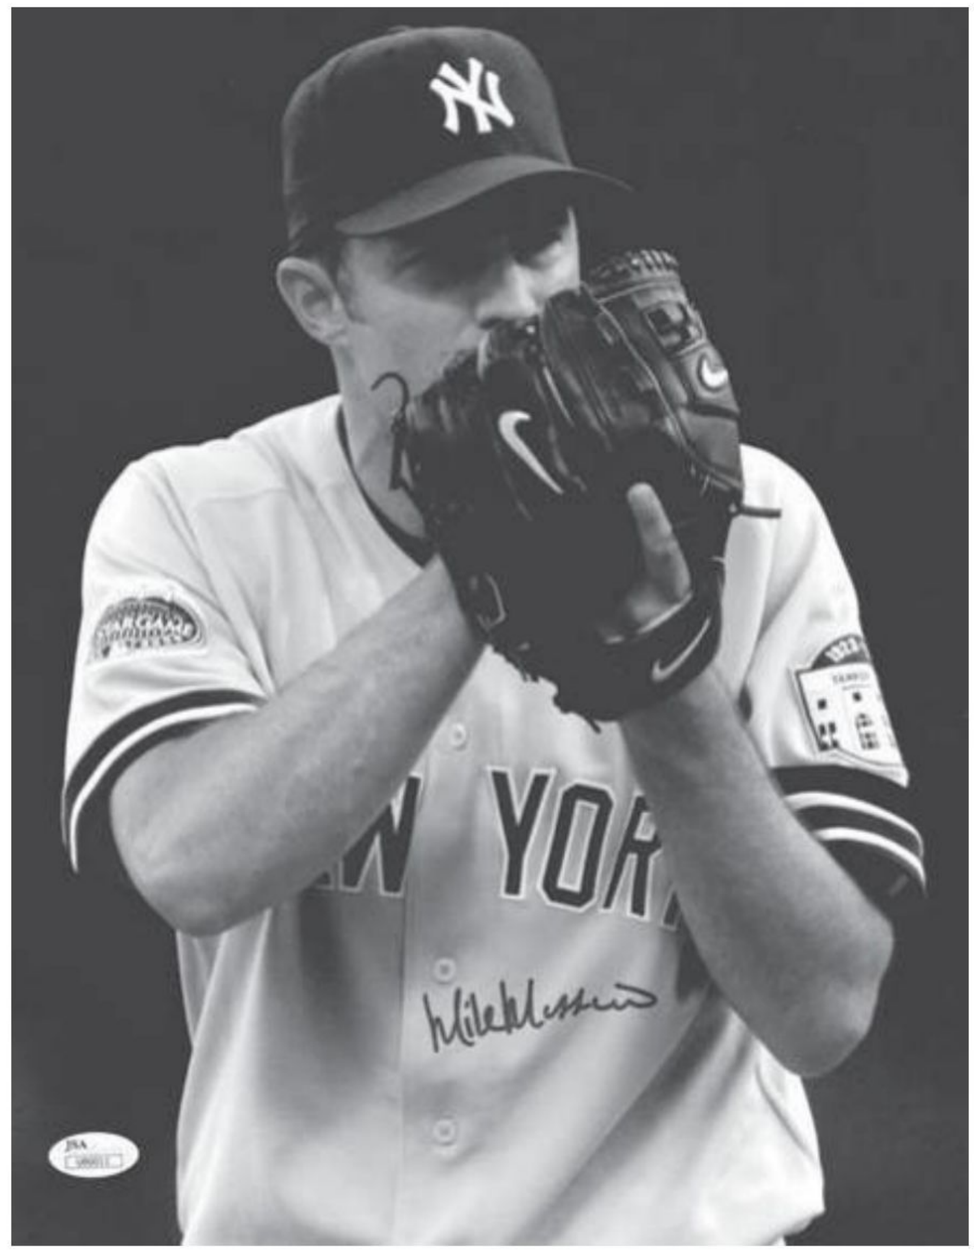
2015 Topps Gypsy Queen No. 31

With the Yankees, Mussina continued to add to his accomplishments as a major league pitcher and reached some impressive milestones. He won his 200th game on April 11, 2004, beating the White Sox 5–4. He went on to pick up another 50 wins, notching his 250th career win on Sept. 23, 2007, when he defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 7–5. That put Mussina in position to reach 270 wins the next season. He got into two World Series with New York (2001 and 2003). Even though he had made it to the postseason with the Orioles twice (1996 and 1997), the team never got into the Fall Classic.

In 2001, Mussina pitched in a historic game in the ALDS as the Yankees worked their way through the postseason to the World Series. The Yankees lost the first two games of the 2001 ALDS to a surprising Oakland A's team and were on the verge of elimination when Mussina got the call to pitch Game 3.

Moose threw seven scoreless innings, allowing only four hits and one walk. Mussina was protecting a one-run Yankees lead, in the top of the seventh inning, when Jeremy Giambi singled with two out. The next batter, Terrence Long, lined a pitch down the right-field line. Outfielder Shane Spencer raced over and grabbed the bouncing ball, but overthrew two cutoff men. However, shortstop Derek Jeter had made his way to foul territory along the first-base line near home plate. He fielded the errant throw and made a backhanded flip to catcher Jorge Posada, who tagged out the hard-running Giambi at the plate to end the inning. Mussina can only shake his head in amazement when thinking about the play that eventually led to the Yankees' 1–0 victory.

The Bronx Bombers came back to win the next two games of that ALDS on their way to the 2001 ALCS against the Seattle Mariners. Mussina won Game 3 of the 2001 ALCS as the Yankees defeated the Mariners in that series 4 games to 1.



Mike Mussina was selected to be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2019.

In the 2001 World Series against the Arizona Diamondbacks, Moose had a rough outing in Game 1, losing to Curt Schilling. But he came back in Game 5, whiffing 10 batters in eight strong innings. The Yankees won the game 3–2 in 12 innings, but Moose was not involved in the decision. The Diamondbacks defeated the Bronx Bombers in the series 4 games to 3.

There were many more thrills ahead for Mussina as a Yankee, including finally winning 20 games in a season in 2008. That victory came on the last day of the season, and proved to be the last start of Mussina's career. The Yankees were in Boston at Fenway Park on September 28, 2008.

"We were rained out the day before and scheduled to play a day-night doubleheader," Mussina recalled.

Moose said there was a heavy cloud ceiling and he didn't know if they would even be able to play two games that day.

"Joe Girardi (the Yankees manager) asked me which game I wanted to pitch. I thought, 'Well, we may only be able to get one in, so I'd better pitch the first one.'

I pitched well and won my 20th game, the only time I won 20, and it came on the last day of the season and the last day of my career. It's one of my most memorable moments as a Yankee," the Hall of Famer said.

The Yankees won that game 6–2 and did play the nightcap, but lost that second game 4–3 in 10 innings. In total, Mussina won 123 games, with a 3.88 ERA, during his career with the Yankees.

At the end of the 2008 season, Mussina had a decision to make. He always wanted to leave the game on top and what represents being at the top of your game more then winning 20 games at age 39? But then there was that gnawing question about staying around and trying to reach that pinnacle of 300 wins. Physically, Moose felt good and thought he could return for one more season at age 40. But would it be one more season? He could not win the 30 games he needed to get to 300 wins in one season. Then, he thought, would he end up just hanging around for a few more years, trying to scratch out victories to get 300 and perhaps dilute his career in the process?

After his 20-win season, Mussina felt he could retire on his own terms and took the opportunity.

"I think I retired from baseball at the right time for me and my family," he said.

Quiet and reserved, Mussina combined his love for baseball and all sports with a passion for crossword puzzles, especially the challenging ones in the New York Times. During downtimes at the ballpark, he zealously worked on the crosswords and was such a well-known fan of the puzzles that he appeared in a noteworthy documentary about crossword puzzles, called Wordplay (2006). Other crossword-puzzle aficionados in the public eye who appeared in the film included former president Bill Clinton, former senator Bob Dole, comedian Jon Stewart and documentarian Ken Burns.

With so many highlights during his career as both an Oriole and a Yankee, it was easy to see why Mussina couldn't decide which logo should appear on his cap on the plaque in Cooperstown that will forever tout his accomplishments. The final decision was to have no logo on the cap.

"I almost split my career down the middle between the two organizations. I couldn't sit here and choose between one or the other," he said. "Both the Yankees and the Orioles were instrumental in my reaching Cooperstown. I am proud to have played for these great organizations, in front of the tremendous fans in Baltimore and New York, and I am honored to have the opportunity to represent both of them in the Hall of Fame."

Throughout his career, Mussina had brushes with perfection. Moose pitched several near-perfect games. With the Orioles in 1997, he retired the first 25 Cleveland Indians he faced in a game on May 30, before Sandy Alomar Jr. got a single with one out in the ninth. Moose then struck out the last two batters he faced for a one-hit 3–0 victory.

The next season, on August 4, Mussina mowed down the first 23 Detroit Tigers batters he faced before giving up a double to Frank Catalanotto with two out in the eighth inning. He then retired the side. The Tigers' Deivi Cruz got a single against Mussina with one out in the ninth, but then Moose got the next two Detroit batters out to win the game 4–0.

But the closest the Pennsylvania native ever got to a perfect game came when he was with the Yankees. It happened on Sept. 2, 2001, at Fenway Park, and it doesn't come much closer than this. Mussina was pitching against former Yankee David Cone, who was winding up his major league career by playing a few final seasons with the Red Sox. Moose was breezing through the Red Sox lineup. He was extremely sharp that game, needing only 70 pitches through the first six innings to close down the Red Sox, and that included striking out 11 batters.

Cone, for his part, gave up only two hits to the Yankees in the first six innings. The Bombers had a chance to score in the seventh inning, but failed to push a run across.

Moose kept going. Batter after batter, the Red Sox went down in frustration. Finally, in the top of the ninth inning, the Yankees broke through and scored a run. It was 1–0 and Mussina was going out for the bottom of the ninth with a perfect game intact. Boston's Shea Hillenbrand led off the bottom of the ninth with a ground ball wide of first. Mussina admits that he thought the perfect game was lost at that point. Yankees first baseman Clay Bellinger dove out and speared the ball, then flipped to Moose, covering first, and got the out on a close play.

"I thought that was it. We got the play that could have ruined the perfect game and we made it," Mussina said.

But he didn't let up. He struck out the next batter, Lou Merloni, and was still throwing hard. Then the Red Sox sent in Carl Everett to pinch-hit for catcher Joe Oliver. Mussina had struck out Everett four times in a game earlier in the season. Each time it was on high fastballs. He knew how to get Everett out.

Mussina jumped ahead in the count, two strikes, no balls. He's one strike away from a perfect game and throws the high fastball. Everett reaches out and dumps the pitch into left center for a hit. The perfect game, the no-hitter, lost. Like the pro he always was, Mussina collected himself and got the next batter, Trot Nixon, to ground out to give the Yankees the victory.

"Sure, it was disappointing. But now when you look back at it, you can realize and appreciate what a great game it was," Mussina said. "My thought process during the game was more on what Coney was doing than on me, and that helped me get through the game. We weren't scoring. I thought I was going to throw a no-hitter but it wasn't going to matter anyway because I was going to come out of the game before it was decided and not be involved in the decision."

In other words, he muses, an asterisk for pitching nine innings of perfect or no-hit baseball with nothing to show for it.

"So I was so focused on Coney I wasn't thinking about a perfect game until after we scored," he said.

"Throughout my career I had a lot of almosts. I almost pitched a perfect game. I almost pitched a no-hitter. I almost won a Cy Young Award. I almost won a World Series and, until now, I almost made it to the Hall of Fame. Now that I'm in the Hall of Fame, I can live with those other almosts." ◆

Noteworthy items include a 1965 Yankees team sheet, a lot of 392 different New York Yankees signed 8x10s, a Mantle/Maris 8x10 photo, and a 16x20 signed photo by Mickey Mantle and Pete Rose to each other from Mantle's restaurant.

Signed baseballs include singles of Jimmie Foxx, Rogers Hornsby, Joe Page and Jackie Robinson. Team balls include 1928, 1934 and 1936 New York Yankees signed baseballs, and a rare 1946 Satchel Paige signed barnstorming tour ball.

Historical autographs include a Gem Mint 2008 Barack Obama signed election night ticket. Entertainment autographs include a fresh collection of 8x10 photos and large format photos signed to an editor in the 1940s and 1950s.

Basketball collectors will see vintage 1968 UCLA Bruins signed cards, a program signed by Pete Maravich and his father in 1970, two Michael Jordan UDA basketballs, and a selection of LeBron James and Michael Jordan signed oversize photos.

Baseball memorabilia closes out the auction. Items here include a 1927 World Series program, first game programs for Jackie Robinson and Mantle, a 1969 Mets pendant given to the wife of a player and a circa 1977 Yankees true game jacket.

The auction closes on June 5.

Home run hero

Bucky Dent's home run against the Boston Red Sox 40 years ago is still talked about today

Bucky Dent's favorite collectibles, which he's also most proud of, are the 1977 and '78 World Championship rings he won with the New York Yankees.

The slick-fielding, All-Star shortstop also donated the glove he used throughout the 1978 season, along with a home uniform, to the Baseball Hall of Fame for its collection of artifacts from the Seventies.

But the item Dent is most famous for is the bat he used to help defeat the Red Sox in a special one-game playoff at Fenway Park on Oct. 2, 1978. With the Yankees trailing, 2-0, in the top of the seventh inning, Dent popped a three-run homer over the Green Monster as a stunned Boston crowd watched in disbelief.

At home plate, base runners Roy White and Chris Chambliss greeted an exuberant Dent at the plate.

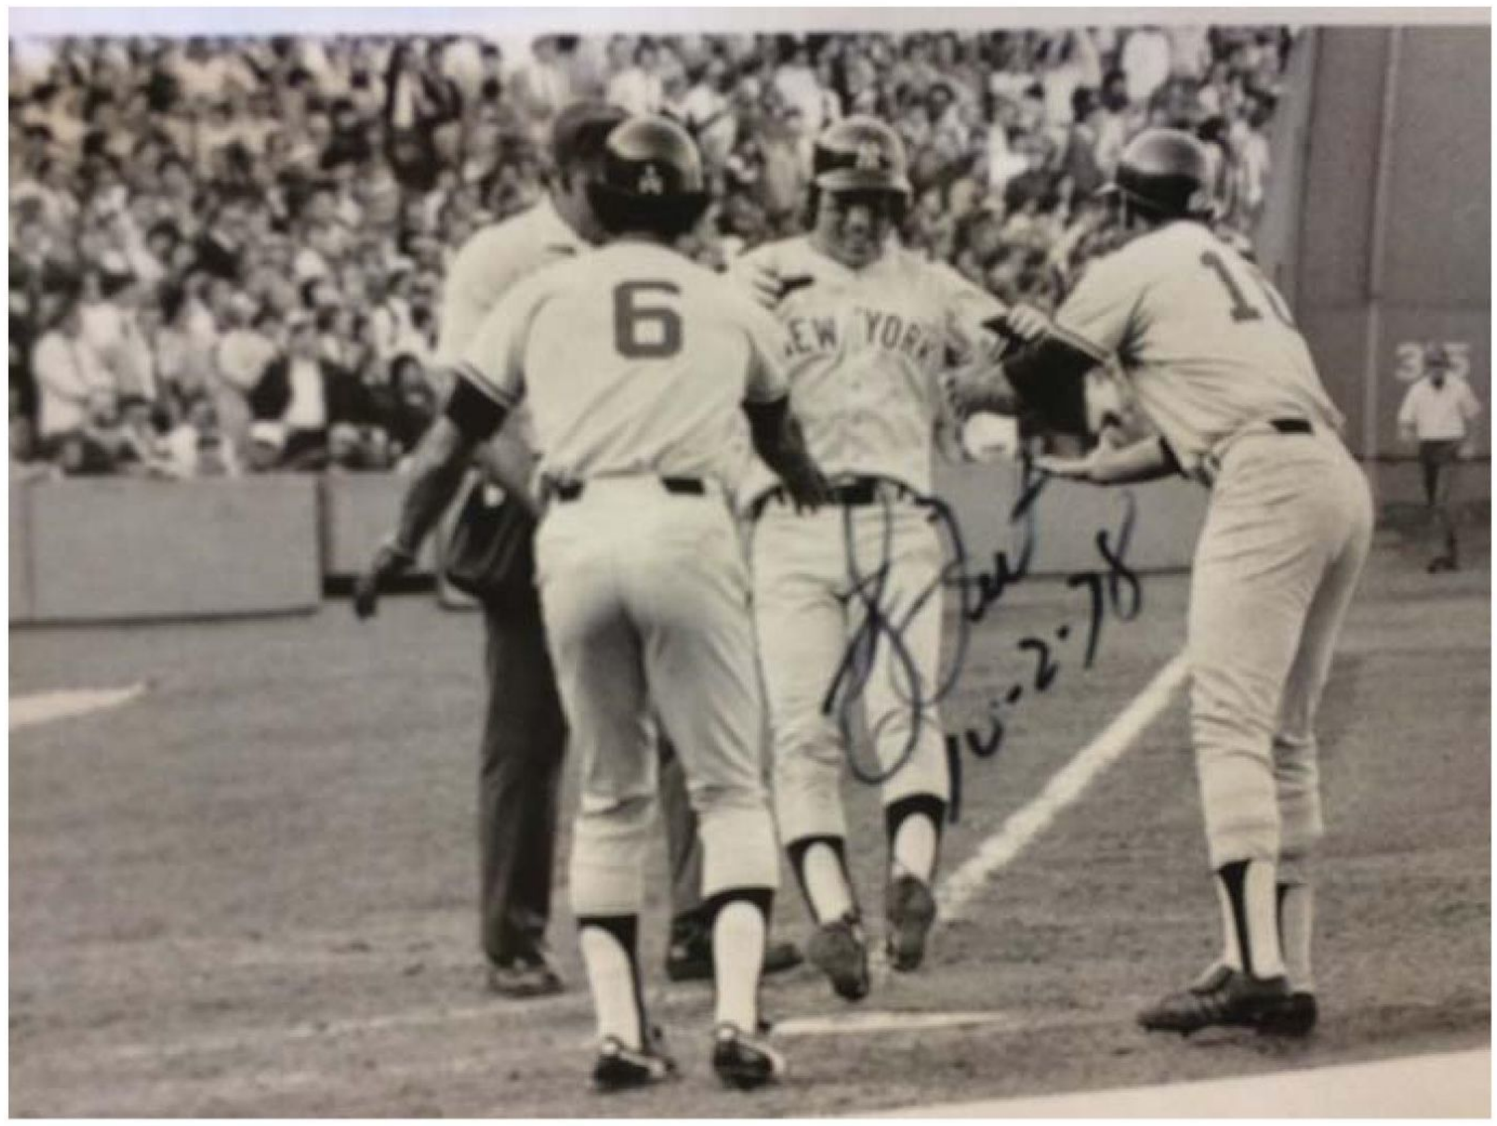
The Yankees went on to win the game, the American League pennant and World Series, in which Dent was named Most Valuable Player after hitting .417, including three hits in the sixth and final contest, a 7-2 victory over the Dodgers.

However, an intriguing mystery has recently emerged surrounding the home run bat's fate, whereabouts and authenticity.

Last fall, Dent and teammate Mickey Rivers went to Yankee Stadium for an event commemorating the 40th anniversary of Dent's heroic Fenway Park round-tripper. The two are forever linked in Yankees history because Dent used Rivers' bat for the famous blast.

"I had been struggling at the plate, so before that game I asked Mickey, 'Can I borrow your bat?'," Dent said. "I cracked it during batting practice. Then in the seventh inning when I fouled a ball off my foot, I went back to the on-deck circle. Mickey came over and said, 'Homey, you've got the wrong bat. That one's cracked.' "

"I really wasn't paying attention to him," Dent said. "I was worried more about my foot. So I turned around to walk back to the plate and the bat boy ran up to me and said, 'Hey! Mickey told me you've got the wrong bat.' So I just switched them out and the first pitch (Mike) Torrez threw, I hit the home run."



Bucky Dent autographed photos of his famous Oct. 2, 1978 home run during a visit to the Prospect Center for developmentally disabled persons in Queensbury, N.Y. In the photo Dent reaches home plate as Yankees teammates Roy White and Chris Chambliss look on. White and Chambliss were on base for the home run that gave the Yankees a 3-2 lead in a game that clinched the American League East title.

The bat believed to be the one Dent used later sold for $61,000 and was recently on loan for display in the Yankee Stadium museum.

But now it's highly questionable whether this is the actual bat, as outlined in a story by Newsday sportswriter Steven Marcus, who reports that neither Dent nor Rivers are sure what happened to it.

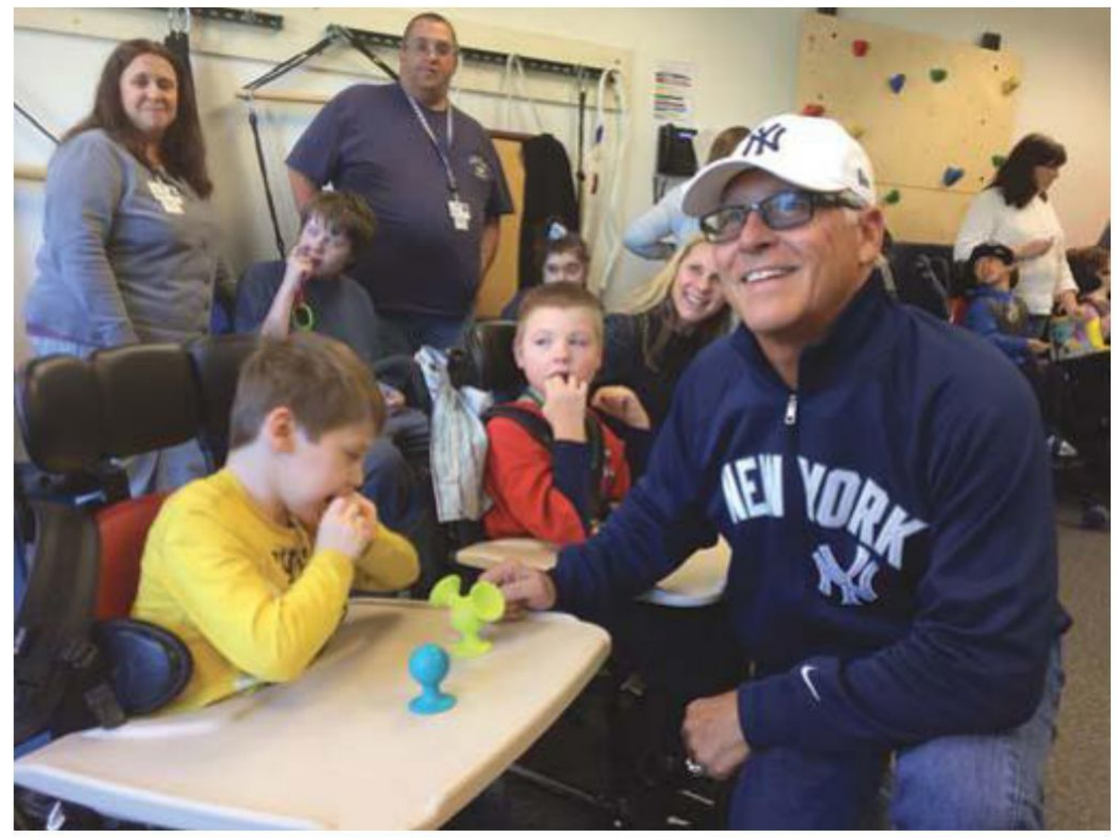
A late Long Island resident, Angelo Naples, was allegedly given the bat right after the game, as he was acquainted with many Yankees and was quite often allowed in their clubhouse. Naples' family says he had the bat signed by Dent, Rivers and Torrez, and that he later sold it to the late well-known memorabilia collector Barry Halper, a Yankees minority owner. Most of Halper's collection was auctioned by Sotheby's in Manhattan, in 1999.

In 2004, the bat's buyer, Stephen Waters, wrote Dent a letter to let him know he had purchased it, Marcus reported.

Marcus recently interviewed the 1978 Yankees bat boy, now 58-year-old Anthony Sarandrea, who described the post-game clubhouse following the Oct. 2, 1978 game as sheer pandemonium. He told Marcus: "My opinion is you couldn't really tell which bat it is," adding that it likely "got mixed up with a bunch of other bats."

However, Sotheby's officials stand by the bat's authenticity.

And Naples' family insists that Rivers told Naples the bat he handed him was the one Dent used, later purchased by Halper and then Waters.



New York Yankees hero Bucky Dent met and signed autographs for young fans during a visit to the Prospect Center for developmentally disabled persons in Queensbury, N.Y. He was also the guest speaker at a fundraising dinner for the Center. PAUL POST PHOTOS

Although not the final answer, Marcus, after delving into the story, has an opinion, too.

"The bat in the Stadium (museum) is the one that was sold at the auction, no question about that," he said. "But there is no proof that it is the actual bat Dent used for the home run. The players involved merely signed a bat that was handed to them. I'd say the chance of it being the actual one from that at-bat is slim. There is no evidence that any care was taken in how the home run bat was handled afterward."

One thing is absolutely certain, however.

Dent's fame and popularity as a Yankees hero is just as strong now as 40 years ago, when he earned a well-deserved place of honor in Bronx Bomber history.

This was clearly apparent during a recent visit to Queensbury, N.Y., where kids at the Prospect Center for developmentally disabled persons clamored for his autograph.

Children greeted Dent with a loud chorus of "Take Me Out to the Ballgame." Then he made his way around the room, paying special attention to each person there.

"Hey, I like your shirt," said Dent, admiring a young boy's Yankees emblem.

The trip to upstate New York was for a special fundraising dinner, which netted more than $30,000 for the Prospect Center, a division of the Albany, N.Y.-based Center for Disability Services, which helps more than 12,000 people at 80 sites in 15 upstate New York counties.

The Center for Disability Services has a long-standing relationship with the Yankees, whose stars have visited the Albany region for charitable events for many years. Last winter, Yankees manager Aaron Boone and New York Giants tight end Evan Engram took part in a telethon that raised more than $2 million.

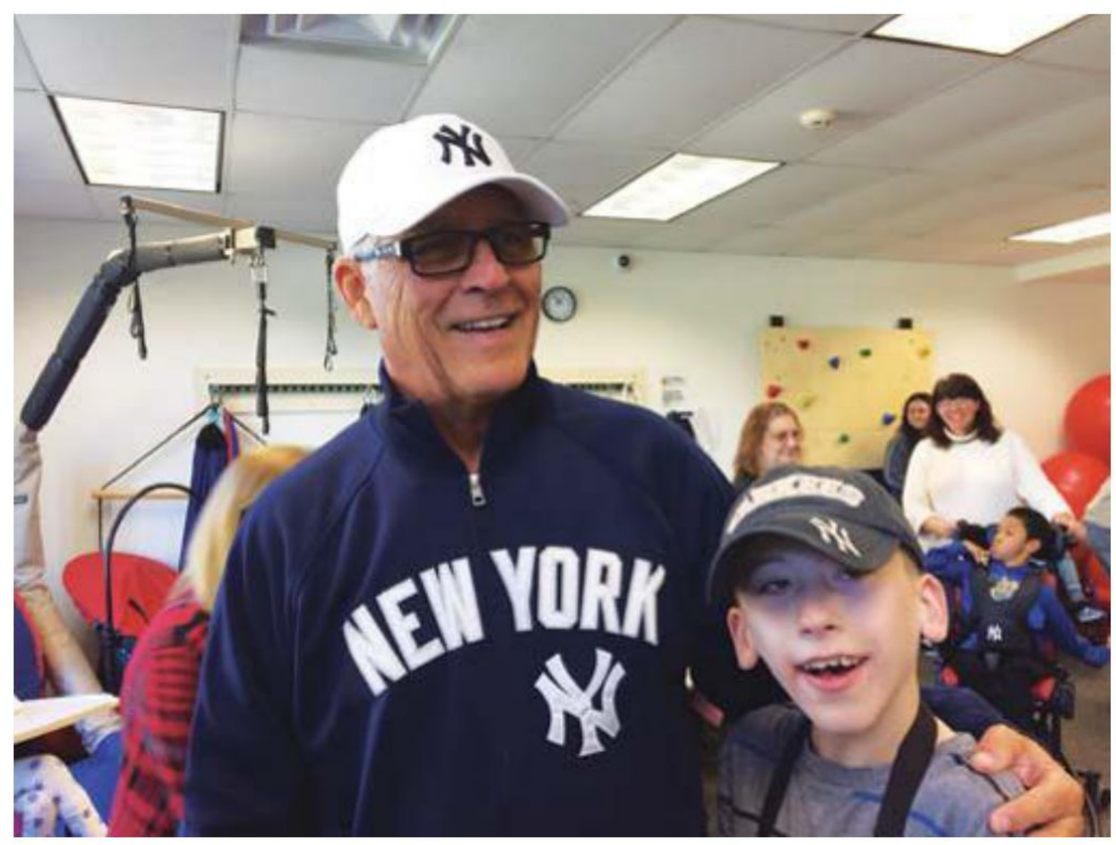
Anne Schneider Costigan, the Center's spokesperson, said Dent was a perfect fit for this past fall's fundraising dinner.

"With this being the 40th anniversary of his home run, Bucky Dent was the first one that came to mind," she said.

Likewise, Dent thoroughly enjoys making such appearances.

"It's so important to give back," he said. "I enjoy meeting people and making kids happy. It's always fun to put smiles on their faces and bring a fun day to them. I light up, too."

"The fans were so great to me when I played in New York,"



Bucky Dent puts smiles on kids' faces during a visit to the Prospect Center in Queensbury, N.Y. Many children wore Yankees caps and jerseys that Dent autographed.

he said. "I was national chairman for Easter Seals when I played there. So I have an opportunity to do a lot of this kind of work."

Dent talked at length about his career, the Yankees and what made the 1977 and '78 teams so special.

"We had characters with character," he said. "We had guys like Sparky Lyle, (Lou) Piniella, (Thurman) Munson, Reggie (Jackson). We had a bunch of different characters who came together to win championships."

"It looks like the Yankees have that right now," Dent said. "I like watching them play. They're fun. It's just fitting a couple more pieces together to get to the next level."

Although retired, he still makes appearances for the Yankees at events such as corporate functions and dinners.

Dent's playing career spanned 12 seasons, starting with the White Sox, which chose him in the first round (sixth overall) of the 1970 June draft. He reached the big leagues in 1973 and made the All-Star team in just his second full season (1975) when he had a league best .981 fielding average. He led the league in fielding three times.

In April 1977, he was traded to New York for outfielder Oscar Gamble and pitcher LaMarr Hoyt. The Yankees reached the World Series three times during his five full seasons in pinstripes.

But after five-plus seasons he was dealt to the Rangers for outfielder Lee Mazzilli in August 1982. He led the league in fielding in '83 at Texas and retired in 1984 following a brief stint with the Royals.

However, Dent later returned to New York as Yankees skipper for parts of the 1989 and '90 campaigns. That was followed by 10 years as a coach for the Cardinals and Rangers.

For many years, he also ran a baseball school in Delray Beach, Florida, where the main playing field was a replica of Fenway Park, complete with the Green Monster.

That unforgettable tie-breaking game was required because the Yankees and Red Sox finished the regular season with identical 99-63 records. The Yankees couldn't do a thing for six innings as Boston hurler Mike Torrez held them to two hits.

A photo of Bucky Dent's famous home run in 1978. The photo is autographed by Dent and Boston Red Sox pitcher Mike Torrez, who gave up the home run.

After White and Chambliss singled to start the seventh, Dent's one-out three-run homer sailed high into the bright autumn sky for a 3-2 Yankees lead.

Later that inning, Thurman Munson hit an RBI double, and Reggie Jackson's solo shot in the eighth frame actually turned out to be the game-winner, as the Red Sox rallied for two runs before Hall of Fame reliever Goose Gossage closed things out in the ninth.

Baseball has changed a great deal since Dent's heroic homer more than 40 years ago. Analytics have completely altered the way baseball is played, with infield shifts and a steady stream of pitching changes in each contest.

"I'm from an old school," Dent said. "I think there's room for analytics. When I was coaching, being in the right position, that's part of it. But you can go too far with it, too. You've got to give players an opportunity to use their instincts and play the game." ◆

Keeping Yankees healthy

Dana Cavalea's career in baseball has helped him amass a special memorabilia collection

Dana Cavalea's memorabilia collection is highlighted by autographed replica jerseys commemorating feats by some of the greatest players in New York Yankees and baseball history.

"A-Rod ordered a bunch of different bats for us for his 500th home run," Cavalea said. "Mariano Rivera signed a customized jersey for his 300th save, and Derek Jeter and Ichiro had bats made for their 3,000th hits."

These are just some of the benefits Cavalea enjoyed during his career as the Bronx Bombers' strength, conditioning and performance coach for many years.

But his favorite piece of hardware is the World Series ring the Yankees gave him after winning their 27th and most recent championship, 10 years ago this fall against the Phillies.

Alex Rodriguez of the New York Yankees is stretched out by strength and conditioning coach Dana Cavalea before a game against the Baltimore Orioles at Oriole Park at Camden Yards on May 9, 2009.

"To see that final out, the ball being thrown to Mark Teixeira at first base was absolutely amazing," Cavalea said. "We're talking 162 games, 30 spring training games and another 11-plus to win the World Series. That's a lot of games.

"To see firsthand what it takes to stay focused, disciplined and process-driven for that many days and not let your mind slip, not losing focus on your actual goal and what it takes for a team to actually win … that was amazing."

That same year he was honored with the Nolan Ryan Award, a recognition given annually by the Professional Baseball Strength and Conditioning Society to an individual whose accomplishments reflect exemplary dedication to the field.

Cavalea had a front-row seat to all the team's highs and lows, while developing friendships with former Yankees greats, too, such as Yogi Berra, Whitey Ford, Reggie Jackson and Ron Guidry.

His experiences and lessons from them are captured in a new book, "Habits of a Champion: Nobody Becomes A Champion By Accident."

"I wanted to give people from young athletes to young entrepreneurs, maybe even retired people looking for that second wind, a resource they can use to better their personal performance and be inspired and motivated at the same time," Cavalea said. "I was able to distill it into 15 lessons, plus a bonus by Reggie Jackson and a foreword written by Joe Girardi."

Some tips are quite simple, yet highly valuable in sports, business and life in general. For example, Jeter shared with Cavalea the importance of being on time, which demonstrates respect.

"He talks about respect in a different way, saying if somebody doesn't respect your time they don't respect you," Cavalea said. "Rather than just say: Be on time, Derek tells how being on time and respect are directly linked together. That's one story.

"Another is about Joe Torre and how to lead and get the most out of people. He talks about having meetings that are closed door rather than public, to make sure you're not airing other people's laundry out in public."

One day, at Fenway Park, Cavalea admired an expensive watch Reggie Jackson was wearing.

So he said: "Hey Reggie, what kind of watch is that?"

Reggie replied: "It's a Rolex Daytona, but you can't get there yet."

Cavalea admitted being taken aback, but then realized Jackson was using the exchange to motivate him.

"What he meant was, 'Hey Dana, it's not that you can't ever get there. It's just that right now you're not in a position in your life to have this. But let me tell you steps to get there'," Cavalea said. "He followed it up with an action strategy that was pretty cool. Those little lessons were very impactful."

Cavalea's job with the Yankees came about in totally unexpected fashion. Originally from Long Island, he went to the University of South Florida, in Tampa, to escape cold, grey Northeast winters.

"I started by just being an intern with the USF football team's strength and conditioning department," he said. "About two weeks before spring training in my sophomore year I was up at Legends Field, watching all these Yankee players on the field training. I had my flip phone, taking pictures, and sent them home to my mom and dad in New York and all my buddies.

"Literally the next day I went to the strength coach I was interning under for USF and he said, 'Hey Dana, I got a call from a guy at the Yankees. Do you have a desire to intern there as well?'"

"Absolutely!" Cavalea replied. "I was just there yesterday as a matter of fact."

"So the next thing you know I'm driving to the field, I'm a nervous wreck," he said. "I parked my car, walked into the front office and they said, 'Hey are you Dana Cavalea? Come with us.'

"They put a lanyard around my neck, put me in Yankee gear and the next thing you know I'm in the middle of the field for a team stretch, with the same guys I'd taken pictures of the day before. Clemens, Pettitte, I can still see it today. It was really an amazing time. I was an intern working for free. I did that for three years."

Cavalea's big break with the Yankees came when his boss, head strength and conditioning coach Marty Miller, was fired the day after highly-touted rookie Phil Hughes suffered a serious hamstring injury while pitching a no-hitter at Texas on May 1, 2007. It was the latest in a series of injuries to Yankees hurlers, and with the team off to a slow last-place start, Miller was let go and Cavalea took his place.

"I became the head guy at 23 years old," he said. "Everything happened very quickly."

Players in general now are considerably bigger, faster and stronger than stars of the 1950s and '60s. A lot of this is the result of better nutrition and year-round weight training programs, especially with so much emphasis on home runs in today's game.

But Cavalea believes this is also contributing to serious injuries that sideline players for weeks at a time.

"I actually think guys are lifting too much," he said. "They're lifting too much and getting their body big and tight. Tendons are getting fatter and muscles are getting shorter. You're almost inviting injuries.

"You want a baseball player to be loose and not have any tension in their body. The first player to talk to me about that was Ichiro Suzuki. He said, 'Dana when I first came to the United States from Japan, I started lifting like an American, putting on size, gaining weight, getting bigger and thicker. But I was getting tighter every single day.'"

Ichiro went back to Japan, met an occupational therapist and started doing exercises to make sure his joints were open and loose and his tissue was long. At that point, he was able to stay a lot healthier throughout his career and never got hurt.

"When I look at players like Jeter, Rivera, Pettitte and Robinson Cano, guys who never got hurt, they had no tension in their body," Cavalea said. "They lifted and trained, but not at a level that was tightening their body up and thickening their tissue. So I think there's too much emphasis on weight training and not enough emphasis on joint mobility and flexibility."

"Another way to change your mobility is by using bands instead of weights," he said. "But most important, focus on power exercises — cleans and snatches — which are oriented to developing total body power instead of total body hypertrophy and size. Baseball is a power sport so focus on power based exercises and combine that with a good flexibility and mobility program."

However, Cavalea's job entailed much more than the physical aspects of preparing for and staying healthy during the course of a long, grueling season.

"My job was to oversee $300 million-plus in human capital and assets and make sure those assets were protected for the Steinbrenner family in terms of their overall health and performance, both physical and mental," Cavalea said. "It started out as strength and conditioning, but evolved into all aspects of performance. When you're working with a guy physically, if he's injured you're also working on his mindset from a rehabilitative standpoint. We had a training staff and a mental conditioning coach. My job was overall performance — it was physical, mental, rehab, speed, strength and power enhancement.

"I worked with the best: Rivera, Jeter, Pettitte, A-Rod, Posada. I worked under Joe Torre and Joe Girardi. My job was to deploy insights from the mental side, insights from the trainers and get the guys back and ready to play."

But after the 2014 season, Cavalea decided to strike out on his own so he and the Yankees parted ways amicably. He now has his own customized personal performance business, working with athletes and high-level corporate executives alike.

"I still work with athletes as well, but I work through agents rather than teams," he said. "For example, if an athlete from the Houston Astros comes to town, his agent calls and says, 'Hey Dana, I need you to work on him.' Another part is CEO executive type coaching where I put together health plans and lifestyle strategies for CEOs and executives. I also do corporate speaking, going into companies, motivating the workforces, almost treating them as if they're one of my players."

He misses the daily camaraderie of being surrounded by all-time Yankees greats, but is still close friends with many of them.

"Willie Randolph was at my wedding two years ago," Cavalea said. "With these guys, it's like a big family. What's so interesting is that you don't see them very often, but whenever you do you pick up right where you left off. It's a big fraternity."

"It was great," he said. "You'd have Reggie, Whitey Ford and Yogi Berra. I took care of Yogi for years, put him on the treadmill and handled his workout. The thing with baseball and sports in general is you don't know how things are going to go. Sometimes they come full circle and you end up right back where you started. The main thing is to keep a really positive relationship with everybody and realize that was a big chapter in your life book."

"I do miss the team concept, being part of that team day to day, the winning and the losing," Cavalea said. "And I enjoyed seeing the country in a very first-class manner. I had a chance to work with the best the game may ever see. But it's a new group there now. So it's different. Times have changed."

Unlike Jeter, Rivera and Posada who spent their entire careers in pinstripes, Cavalea laments the lack of team loyalty found with many of today's younger players.

"We've seen that this year with Bryce Harper and Manny Machado," he said. "Players are always going to go where the contract is, as opposed to looking to build a dynasty and a legacy, and taking a little bit less money to stay and do something great with the organization that took a chance on them as a kid. It's changed. I liked the days of old quite a bit."

The relationship you have with players isn't as deep and can't get as deep," Cavalea said. "Every year in spring training you knew Derek, Mariano and Jorge would be there. They were the Yankees. They were there from the time they were rookies all the way to the end of their careers. That wont' happen anymore. Today it's a much different scenario within the game." ◆

2019 National Sports Collector's Convention

Unopened Material Authentication/Wrapping

As in years past, we will be providing on-site authentication/wrapping for unopened material at this year's National Sports Collectors Convention. The fees to be charged at the show will be 10% of our advertised buy price per box/rack pack with a minimum charge of $12 and the maximum charge of $2000. We cannot authenticate any unopened items currently being authenticated by PSA. We will not be authenticating cases at The National. *( If any material submitted for authentication at The National is not completed prior to noon on Sunday August 4th, it will be brought back to the office and shipped from there at the customers expense. **)*

Pre-National Authentication: If you would like to ship your authentication to our home office in Schererville, IN prior to July 1st, 2019, we will authenticate/wrap it and bring it with us to The National. Normal authentication fees apply.

Post National Authentication: If you would like to drop off your authentication to our booth at The National, we will bring it back to our home office for authentication/wrapping. Normal authentication fees apply. Customer pays return shipping. Timeframe will vary.
